Sulfa Drugs: A Problem For Pork Producers

BY LARRY HUTCHINSON
PSU Extension Veterinarian

UNIVERSITY PARK — Sulfa drugs have been used by pork producers for decades to help control diseases and increase feed efficiency. Recent developments may cause swine producers to rethink use of these drugs.

Item: Japanese importers of U.S. pork recently complained that some of the meat had traces of sulfa drug. USDA personnel are checking this out.

Item: The Food and Drug Administration has just released a report showing that sulfamethazine causes thyroid tumors in mice.

Item: Sulfamethazine is the sulfa drug most commonly found at slaughter in swine tissues. Other sulfa drugs are much less commonly found.

Item: Over the past ten years, violative levels of sulfamethazine have been found in 4 to 13% of tested swine tissues. After an all-out educational campaign on sulfa residues in 1979 and 1980, sulfa residues declined for several years; lately, though, they are creeping upward.

Item: Sulfa drugs are environmentally stable; they stay around a long time on feed, water, urine, manure and in liquid manure pits and lagoons. Swine can pick up sulfas if they have access to manure, urine or bedding from treated animals.

Item: The Food Safety Inspection Service of the USDA has been testing about 1,400 pork carcasses per year for sulfas. With new in-plant tests, they're expecting to test up to 10% of all consignments at major swine slaughter houses throughout the U.S.

Item: The tolerance, or allowable limit, for sulfa residues in pork tissue is 0.1 parts per million. If a pork carcass shows violative residues, the producer may not be paid for that animal and will be required to send the next five hogs under special permit so that they may be tested.

Delaware Herds Increase Milk

Farmland Preservation

Eckel Urges State Legislators To Get Cracking

BY LISA RISSER

HERSHEY — Pennsylvania Farmers Association President Keith Eckel strongly urged members of the state Senate and House to get the $100 million farmland preservation program underway.

"It is important that action should not be delayed. The time to act is now," he declared. "Passage of the $100 million bond issue was a great beginning. Let's keep the ball rolling."

Eckel addressed the state lawmakers and more than 400 farmers that took part in PFA's annual State Legislative Tour. During the Monday night banquet, Eckel expressed the organization's concern about farmland preservation, meaningful tax reform, and an increase in plant and animal research.

Reminding legislators that voters approved a bond issue by two-to-one to help preserve farmland, Eckel added, "The electorate has in essence written a $100-million check to the Commonwealth to be used to purchase conservation easements for the benefit of future generations of farmers and consumers. We need to cash the check and get on with the future."

Animal health and plant health research are high on the farm organization's list of priority issues. Eckel stated that one-third of the state's agricultural production is lost due to disease. "That is a big loss that must be shouldered by the consumer in the form of increased food prices," he remarked. "Many

National DHIA Convention Report

BY KARL BERGER
Special Correspondent

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Directors and delegates of the National Dairy Herd Improvement Association, custodians of a nationwide system of affiliated state and local DHI associations, tackled several major issues at the organization's annual convention March 14-17 in Indianapolis, Ind., producing policy that may affect individual members in a number of ways.

The four-day affair brought together several hundred state DHI delegates and officials from across the country. In addition to setting policy, the delegates toured local farms and approved several bylaw changes.

Action was taken on two major issues: state lines and quality certification. The delegates tabled a resolution dealing with a third, private testing services.

To J. Robert Kindig, a Conestoga, Pa., farmer and one of National DHIA's 12 directors, the board's decision to endorse a policy on the state line issue holds the most significance for individual dairymen.

The board's action, which followed a favorable reception to the policy from delegates meeting in regional caucuses, establishes a framework for states to resolve situations in which a farmer who lives in one state wants to obtain

Psuedo Rabies Study May Reveal Link To Spread

BY PAT PURCELL

CARLISLE — The spread of pseudo rabies by animals other than hogs, may be a distinct possibility, if the preliminary findings of a recent study prove conclusive. At a luncheon, held Friday in Carlisle, hosted by the Pennsylvania Grange, Dr. Daniel Cohen, University of Pennsylvania, New Bolton Center, discussed the study. Cohen began investigating the spread of PRV in April of 1987, through a request made by the Pennsylvania Grange to Dr. Robert Marschak, Dean at New Bolton Center.

According to Cohen, any virus needs a host. The host becomes a reservoir of infection. If there is evidence that wildlife has become the reservoir of infection, Cohen stated, it would be almost impossible to eradicate the disease.

Efforts to eradicate the disease through physical clean-up, depopulation, and strict bio-security practices, have not prevented the spread of the disease throughout the Lancaster County area. Cohen said there has been a real lack of attention paid to the other animals on the farm and around the farm and especially to wildlife.

There are 52 known cases of pseudo rabies within the state with most incidences of the disease occurring in one narrow geographical area, the Lancaster County area. He also noted that cases outside that area could easily be traced back to Lancaster County.

Wild animals have been trapped

You could stand on almost any rise this week, look across the farmlands and see several neighbors working the soil. Here, Managing Editor, Everett Newswanger, found Aaron Zelset, Leola, in a farm scene looking north across Groffdale Church Rd. The ground is working up nicely, maybe a little dry for this time of year, but rain in the weather forecast gave hope for the alfalfa fields that have been seeded.

Acres Corn Update: Corn futures closed from 1/4 to 1-1/2 cents lower today wuh the nearbys stronger relative to the deferreds. Pressurmg the market today were rumors that the CCC would soon issue a new corn catalog and steady producer loan redemption Support came from a steady export outlook with Egypt scheduled to tender April 7 and South Korea tendering today. Further support came from news the USSR would be allowed to purchase U S grain without consultmg the USDA May closed 1/4 lower at $2.06-1/4 while December lost 1-1/2 cents at $2 20.

Acres Soybean Update: Soybeans settled from 3-1/4 to 5 lower, but above session bottoms in late trading. Front months bounced between 3 lower and 6 lower all day as professional funds sold off and commercials purchased The main focus now is on the March 31st Planting Intentions report with many sidelined awaiting some clues. Added pressure came from a slight increase in farmer selling at the higher levels and quiet CIF and FOB markets May closed at $6 39-3/4 down 3-1/4 trading in a $6 36-1/2 to $6 44-1/2 range through out the session

Acres Wheat Update: Wheat futures closed from 1/4 lower to 3/4 cents higher today after trading in a narrow range throughout the session. A favorable export outlook provided support with an offer to Poland as well as a bid from the USSR for 500,000 MT along with rumors that India was back in line. Continued light CCC sales and steady to higher cash basis levels added further support Weakness was attributed to heavy commission house selling

Acres Cattle Update: After a volatile session, live cattle closed out the day mixed with April 10 higher and the deferreds months from 13 to 35 lower April and June hit new contract highs for the third session but profit-taking dropped the prices into lower areas. A late buying spree was attributed to strong undertones in the fed cattle market and fueleds last minute gains. Pressure on the open was in response to ideas that yesterday's gains were overdone as well as beef market concerns.

FEEDER CATTLE SETTLEMENT PRICE: 03/23/88 $82 05 up $ .12.

ACRES NEXT DAY OUTLOOK: cash -steady futures-steady to mixed.

Acres Hog Update: Live hog futures closed mixed with weakness in the front months and higher in the deferreds Front months losses were attributed to weakening cash fundamentals amid increased runs and the futures premium to cash. Lower cut out values and profit-taking added further pressure Strength in the deferreds was attributed to the unwinding of April/Aug and June/August bull spreads Bellies closed lower but off session lows as spillover from the hogs and increased marketings pressured

ACRES NEXT DAY OUTLOOK· cash - steady to lower futures - steady to mixed

Northeast Chicken Parts

Thurs., March 24, 1988

Trading activity remained light and unaggressive despite a willingness by many sellers to negotiate on most items. Cutlets interest continued to decline and supplies were ample for current needs. Breasts increased in availability and were at least fully adequate at current price levels. Legs and leg quarters were not as freely offered as other items but sellers still struggled to maintain clearances. Wings were ample and slow in clearing with some trucklot volumes sold in the low to mid 30's.

The market tone was barely steady and cautious. Distributive movement was irregular and generally of a disappointing nature. Supplies in most areas easily covered current needs Breakers were selective as most continued to work abbreviated schedules.

OPINION

A Matter Of Life Or Death

With so many reports that try to scare us, we could easily ignore another "epidemic" report-- especially since we have heard about rabies for the last two years. But Ted Fox told Lancaster Farming this week that Lancaster County now has the highest number of rabies cases in Pennsylvania. Ed Gosnell called it an epidemic. Fox and Gosnell are State Conservation officers.

Since wildlife such as skunks and raccoons get credit for much of the spread of the disease, farmers are likely to be apathetic. But they shouldn't be. At this time of year when the domestic animals head out to the spring pastures in close proximity to infected wildlife, farmers become especially vulnerable. For all practical purposes, these paragraphs are a life and death warning to all of our farm family readers.

Don't play with Rabies. This means don't pet wild animals--especially nocturnal creatures that come around your farm buildings in broad daylight and act friendly, dumb or sick. If the animals don't have their normal fear of you, assume they have rabies. This is not open season, but if this kind of animal gets on your property, near your children or farm animals, shoot it, carry it with a shovel, bury it deep enough that your dog won't dig it up, and leave the contaminated shovel in the sun for a few hours to kill the disease germs.

In addition, don't feed your pets outside at night because wild animals will be attracted to the food. Keep your dog tied. It's the law, and it will provide one less possible contact with rabies for your family and livestock.

You should be aware that many infected animals are destroyed without being tested, so they don't get in the publicized numbers for reported cases. Authorities know this. Some think it's good because its puts less strain on the testing system. Others think it creates a false impression that could lead to complacency when the numbers of rabies cases are reported. Either way you should know that right now you are in a hot spot for the rabies virus. Be cautious. Watch for tell-tale signs in every animal you see-- both wild and domestic. Do everything you can to protect yourself, your family and your farm animals from this dreaded disease. And if you are exposed to a suspected rabies carrier, call the emergency number and get advice immediately. In this case, it is a matter of life or death.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Plan For Oat Planting

I know some farmers are considering the use of feed oats for planting this spring, but this may not be a good idea. Feed oats may contain quackgrass, bindweed and other weed seeds. Planting feed oats will generally result in lower yields. You also have the problem that any weed seeds planted will be a problem for years to come. Keep in mind that high quality seed is the smallest part of producing a crop. So, saving a few cents by using inferior or weedy seed doesn't make much sense. On the other hand, homegrown seed of varieties proven successful on your farm can be cleaned, treated and planted if the germination is 80% or better. You can place the seed in a tray with moist soil, cover with wet burlap and keep in a warm place. Then count the seeds that germinate against the total and determine the percent of germination.

To Evaluate Winter Wheat Topdressing

During this season of the year many farmers ask the question, does winter wheat need fertilizing? According to Agronomists, topdressing with fertilizer may or may not be a good idea. There are several things that should be considered before making the decision.

In the first place, do not topdress winter wheat with nitrogen fertilizer if the wheat is to be overseeded with clover or alfalfa. Nitrogen causes heavy growth of wheat which may smother out the new seeding. Now, the winter wheat fields that have come through the winter looking thin, should be topdressed. Use only a straight nitrogen fertilizer, such as urea. Topdressing winter wheat with phosphate or potash fertilizer has not given any increased wheat yields.

Apply the nitrogen fertilizer in early spring at the rate of 30-40 pounds of actual nitrogen per acre.

To Provide Farm Security

Theft and vandalism on farms is on the increase. This is very difficult to prevent because of the various items around farm buildings and homes; also the number of buildings and places to enter are many. However, we suggest that every farmer take some steps in protecting his machinery, tools, livestock and supplies. The automatic lights that come on at dusk and go off at dawn should be of real value in discouraging burglars. There are also many new sensing devices that detect movement around the premises.

Watch dogs are also very useful in detecting strangers around the property. Shops, garages and other smaller buildings should be kept locked when possible. The identification of animals by tags, branding and photographs is very helpful. It is also a good idea to mark all machinery and tools with a permanent ID number. The best number to use is your drivers license number preceded by DL PA (Drivers License, Pennsylvania).

Remember, Social Security numbersd are non-retrievable so it's best not to use it. Farm thefts are on the increase so farmers should take steps to protect their property.

To Increase Pasture Production

One of the best ways to improve permanent pasture is to apply lime and plant food, practice rotational grazing and clip them regularly. This is quicker, cheaper and involves less risk than tearing up the old sod and reseeding. Most permanent pastures have sufficient seed of desirable grass species. The only thing they need is a little tender loving care and the opportunity to grow, and to recover from grazing pressures. Thus, fertility and rotational grazing are very beneficial. The more paddocks you have, the better it is. If your acreage is limited for your size herd, restrict the amount of time cattle and livestock are permitted to graze. Don't let them trample the grass unncessarily by allowing them to roam freely over the pasture while not grazing. After a paddock has been grazed, it can be clipped to control weed growth and to keep the grass young and nutritious. This is also a good time to apply fertilizer and necessary herbicides, while allowing the grass to recover prior to being grazed again.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W ALTHOUSE

THE SILENT VICTOR

March 27, 1988

Background Scripture:
Matthew 26:57 through 27:61.
Devotional Reading:
Isaiah 53:4-12.

Matthew's story of Jesus' last hours is a study in power. There is the mighty power of Rome vested in the Pilate, the Roman Governor. There is also the power of the chief priests and elders. It is not an absolute power, but, although the Jews have been subjugated by the Romans, the latter cannot rule successfully without some cooperation from the former. And there is the power of the people—subject though they are to Roman military might, Pilate cannot afford to ignore their potential for disruption of the Pax Romana, the peace of Rome.

Then there is Jesus.

At first glance, it would seem that he is powerless. The chief priests and scribes arrest him in the Garden of Gethsemane and hand him over into the custody of Pontius Pilate. Jesus appears helpless against both Jerusalem's religious leaders and the occupying Roman Empire. Furthermore, he is apparently in the power of the crowd, for Pilate puts it to them whether he shall release "Barabbas or Jesus?"

HOW POWERFUL?

Yet things are not what they seem. For all of the might of Rome, Pilate is obviously uneasy about this situation. When Jesus remains silent in the face of his questions, instead of flying into a rage, Pilate gropes for some alternative to Jesus' crucifixion. To further unsettle him, his wife sends word: "Have nothing to do with that righteous man, for I have suffered much over him today in dream" (27:19). If Pilate had the power of life or death, why would he feel compelled to publicly wash his hands of all responsibility?

Pilate, a man accustomed to controlling large armies and administering Rome's holdings in Israel, could not compel Jesus to confess or deny the charges brought against him: "...he gave him no answer, not even to a single charge; so that the governor wondered greatly" (27:14).

Consider also the chief priests and scribes. Neither are they as powerful as one might suspect. It must have galled them to have to come to Pilate to petition him for permission to put Jesus to death. These guardians of religious rectitude, for all their power, couldn't get Jesus convicted without false witnesses, perjury, and manipulating the mob. If they were so powerful, why did they have to resort to all of that?

Those who comprised the crowd outside Pilate's palace were also engaged in the struggle for power. But their power was a delusion. Pilate gave them the power of life and death over Jesus, but he was simply using them, letting them take responsibility should this prove to be an unpopular decision. The chief priests and scribes also used them, manipulating them to call for the release of Barabbas and the death of Jesus.

So who was in control here? Not irresolute Pilate, not the impotent chief priests and scribes, nor the frenzied crowds. As one reads this account over and over, it becomes apparent that it is Jesus who really is in control. Jesus, the silent victor teaches us all the nature of true spiritual power. Jesus could have made a brilliant legal defense, disrupted the court with violent outbursts or played upon the sympathy of the mob. But, refusing to play their power game, he conquered them with his silence.

"Sure I'm Feeding YORK CALCIUM CHIPS

With egg prices where they are, I don't need cracked shells. CHIPS help to provide calcium on a time-release basis - it's there in the early morning hours when the shells are being formed.

I'm also getting a better feed conversion. I don't know if it's the grit action of the CHIPS in the gizzard or that CHIPS separate the food particles so that the digestive juices work more efficiently. - I just know that CHIPS work."

YORK CALCIUM CHIPS - The choice of both the poultrymen and the birds.

We'll show you how YORK CALCIUM CHIPS can lower your feed costs.

Pseudo Rabies Study

in cages and sent to the lab to be studied for the PRV. It is a lengthy and complex process, but preliminary findings of the study will be available shortly. Cohen tested raccoons, foxes,cats, dogs, groundhogs and other animals for the infection. In the preliminary findings, Cohen found that 17 percent of the cats tested positive on five different farms with the disease.

Although the evidence is not conclusive and the research continues, there is the possibility that farm cats could be an agent in the spread of the disease. He does not recommend that all hog producers immediately rid their farms of cats, however he does urge producers to obeserve the animals and to consider this possibility. Cohen recounted the outbreak of bovine tuberculosis in the 1960's when 60 percent of the cats were found to be loaded with BTB.

According to Cohen, he is only midway in his study.'The proposal for another grant which would allow him to complete the study is before the state committee and should be acted upon within the next month. If Cohen does not receive the grant, the study will end.

Mark Nestleroth, of Manheim and a former hog producer whose herds were struck with pseudo rabies twice, confirmed Cohen's implications that something other than the hogs can spread the disease. After the first incidence of PRV in Nestleroth's herd, he took great steps towards biosecurity throughout his operation, but several months later Nestleroth's herd was hit the second time.

He went out of business and began raising sheep, but every other day he was losing a lamb. He took every possible precaution to isolate and separate all the animals so he knew that something else again was infecting the herd. He said that unfortunately he had not rid the farm from all of the cats which he had when he had hogs. He added that the cats drink from the same watering troughs as did the hogs and the sheep.

Cohen added that his preliminary findings are not to be interpreted as being conclusive. However, there is a possibility that animals other than the pig may not be dying from the disease but may be a host to the virus and be spreading it.

RCMA Update

Bob Pardoe, who has been working on the steering committee for RCMA, reported that while farmers in western Pennsylvania have flooded RCMA with sign-up contracts, farmers in the central and northeastern regions of the state are slow to join RCMA's efforts to bring farmers together into a bargaining unit.

Pardoe stated that in order for all farmers to receive the premium that RCMA has been successful in acheiving previously, central and northeastern farmers need to join together. If farmers are to survive milk price support cuts, premiums from marketing groups as RCMA are crucial.

According to Pardoe, farmers have only to gain from RCMA's efforts. Members are not responsible for the administration costs, there are no dues and there are no assessments. RCMA only asks that farmers give RCMA permission to move their milk from one handler to another.

Bob Pardoe, Charles Wismer, Ernest Miller and Dr. Daniel Cohen hosted a press luncheon recently sponsored by the Pennsylvania Grange and presented progress reports on RCMA's activities and on a University of Pennsylvania study on the spread of pseudo rabies headed by Dr. Cohen.

National DHIA

service from a DHI organization in another state. Neighboring states are encouraged to negotiate their own agreements to govern such situations. In the absence of agreement, however, a set of national rules adjudicated by regional arbitration boards will resolve disputes.

These rules allow dairymen to receive service from neighboring state DHI associations after a 45-day "cooling off period" (provided, of course, the out-of-state group is willing to provide service).

Kindig, who was encouraged by the action, said it "gives the dairyman some protection" from the "politics" of state and local associations. However, the new policy stops far short of the open competition between state DHI organizations and among the nine regional dairy record processing centers (DRPCs) that has been advocated by some critics of the current system. Frank Dickinson, National DHIA's new chief executive officer, said the decision was a compromise and was "certainly not designed to encourage dairymen to pick and choose" among associations and DRPCs.

The other major controversial issue at the national level -- what, if anything, to do about the growing number of non-DHI testing services in operation -- was sidestepped by the delegates, who voted to table a resolution that would have allowed so-called private testers to provide the official records that are recognized by the breed associations and the bull studs.

The delegates debated two versions of the proposal, which would have put either the National DHIA board of directors or the National DHI Policy Board (a related group that includes representatives from cooperating organizations such as the U.S. Department of Agriculture) in charge of licensing all providers of such records. They were prompted in part by concern about the legal status of the DHI system's monopoly on official records. However, Fred Griffith, then vice president of the national association, said the board of directors needed time to determine whether DHI really does have a problem under restraint of trade laws.

Both the state line and private tester issues emerged from recommendations made last summer by the New Generation Committee, an in-house evaluation group headed by Kindig. The committee's report took on added significance following the eruption into public view of internal divisions at last year's national convention in Philadelphia, where two national directors resigned and former executive secretary Richard Sechrist was asked to leave.

Kindig said stability has returned to the organization under the interim leadership of Jim Cavanaugh as executive secretary and the recent hiring of Dickinson. He also said members of the Northeast Caucus, who have led the calls for policy changes and at one point considered pulling out of the system, are now basically satisfied with progress at the national level.

The delegates also approved a resolution calling for a new set of methods to validate the accuracy of DHI records, including a comparison of milk sale records to those generated on test day by DHI supervisors and the random checking of cow identifications. Dickinson said he expects these and other methods to be implemented gradually throughout the DHI system as the national association's Quality Certification Committee sets up a framework for their use by state groups.

The chief executive said the resolution represents a new approach to the verification issue that has implications for both the legal liability of DHI organizations and the cost of various types of records.

"We just feel that there are a lot of objective ways you can measure DHI records rather than the subjective ways that have been used," he said.

In other action, the delegates selected several new directors and the new board chose officers for the coming year. Griffith is president and Kindig, vice president.

Lamb Gaining Popularity In Restaurants

DENVER, CO. — Fresh American lamb is receiving new merchandising emphasis from three leading suppliers in the U.S. foodservice industry. Sysco, PYA/Monarch and Provimi have recently announced significant new lamb programs. The American Sheep Producers Council is actively involved in supporting each of these efforts.

The food-service industry continues to grow in the U.S. During the past four years, the number of food-service operations offering lamb on their menu has increased more than 43 percent. National Restaurant Association statistics show that in 1986 lamb was the fastest growing center-of-the-plate item. In 1987, 45 percent of consumer food expenditures was for food eaten away from home. This number will increase to 50 percent by 1990.

Sysco, the nation's largest foodservice distributor, promotes the use of fresh American lamb to the foodservice industry. Sysco's Mid-Central division in Olathe, Kansas devoted three full pages to the promotion of lamb in their latest eight page monthly newsletter, "The Source". Included in the newsletter are: Today's Leaner Lamb; The New Look of American Lamb and other information on various cuts. "The Source" is circulated to a variety of restaurants, health care institutions, schools and colleges.

The Southern Division of PYA/Monarch, Inc., the fifth largest foodservice distributor in the U.S., will promote American lamb to their customers beginning March 1. They will be carrying either Monfort or Provimi brands of American lamb. In addition to the traditional sub-primal cuts, Monfort and Provimi produce complete lines of conveniently packaged "chef-ready" products such as loin chops, Denver ribs, boneless sirloin and stew meat. This will be the first major promotion of these new products.

ASPC is helping to assure the success of the new PYA/Monarch lamb program by conducting seminars with the staff of each PYA/Monarch branch. There will be an introductory sales promotion designed to motivate the PYA/Monarch sales force to aggressively sell these new products. The objective of the ASPC promotion is to generate 450 new restaurant customers for American lamb through PYA/Monarch during the three month promotion period.

As of January 1, Provimi Veal Company, Inc. began national distribution of American lamb with all efforts directed to foodservice. Provimi has teamed with a Chicago-based processor and is offering 10 lamb items, including racks, boneless legs and other higher value lamb cuts. ASPC is conducting a series of educational seminars for Provimi's lamb sales staff as part of an ongoing national merchandising training program. Provimi's endeavors are expected to significantly broaden American lamb usage in restaurants nationally.

Herbicides Not Always Necessary

UNIVERSITY PARK, PA. — Farmers have to consider several factors when deciding whether herbicide treatment is justified economically, and they can hear experts discussing these factors at the Western Pennsylvania Tillage Field Day on July 20.

Demonstration plots including different herbicide treatments will be featured at the field day, to be held at the Robert Smith Farm, New Alexandria, Pa., from 9:30 to 3:30.

"Measuring the economic return of herbicides is more difficult in forage crops than in corn or other row crops," says Penn State agronomist Bob Hartzler. "Because forage crops are so competitive, supplemental control strategies such as herbicides frequently aren't warranted."

Hartzler says that each field should be carefully evaluated to determine whether the potential increase in forage quality will exceed the cost of herbicide treatment. For example, a vigorous stand of alfalfa can sucessfully compete with many of Pennsylvania's major weeds without herbicides. So the major components of an alfalfa weed control program should be cultural practices that promote good forage growth. "This would include fertilization, liming, cutting schedule, insect control and other sound agronomic practices," he says.

In those cases where persistent weeds do invade a healthy stand of alfalfa, on herbicide may be a cost-effective method of controlling those weeds. "Several options are available," says Hartzler. "Most products for alfalfa are preemergence herbicides. Since emergence of annual weeds is often erratic in forage crops, timing of application must often be based on the types and numbers of weeds that were present the previous growing season."

Commercial exhibits, educational displays and machinery demonstrations will also be included in the field day. Tours will focus on areas such as small grains and soybeans, manure use, erosion management and corn tillage systems.

The field day is sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension, USDA Soil Conservation Service, the Pennsylvania Forage-Grassland Council and various Pennsylvania agribusinesses.

Preliminary Recommendations Of Natural Dairy Policy

BY KARL BERGER
Special Correspondent

Dairymen unsatisfied with a government dairy policy under which their prices have declined steadily for the past five years may want to pay attention to the news from Washington, D.C., March 31.

That's the day the National Commission on Dairy Policy is expected to make public its recommendations for change.

The 18-member commission, appointed by Secretary of Agriculture Richard Lyng in the fall of 1986, has spent the past year listening to farmers and industry officials across the country. In the past few months, it has tried to assimilate what it was learned into a report its chairman, Dairylea president Clyde Rutherford, calls a "blueprint" for congressional action.

Speaking March 10 in Washington, Rutherford said, "There is no doubt the report of the National Commission on Dairy Policy will supply the tools needed to make the dairy industry more profitable in the future. Its recommendations, once they are made public, are likely to receive serious consideration from those making dairy policy."

The New York dairy farmer offered "a thumbnail sketch of the commission's findings" to industry officials attending the annual meeting of the American Butter and Cheese institutes.

The most important and doubtless controversial of these will involve the issues of production controls and "regionalism," or altering national policies on a region by region basis.

Commission members "feel some form of standby production controls should be permanently available for use when government purchases (of surplus dairy stocks) alone will not balance the market," Rutherford said. Reportedly, the commission will recommend the government commit itself to surplus purchases of up to $7.5 billion annually, $2.5 billion more than the trigger level for cutting the support price under current law.

Although he did not specify what form such controls should take, a recent "leak" of the commission's findings to an industry publication indicates it will advocate the use of animal buyout programs on a regional basis.

Reportedly, the commission also will recommend the use of a two-tier pricing system when supply and demand are more in balance. Under it, dairymen would be paid a lower price for milk marketed in excess of individually established bases.

Rutherford did say any use of production controls should be accompanied by a reduction in the support price the government pays for surplus stocks. This coupling, designed to discourage nonparticipants in such programs from increasing production, was one of a number of "surprises" the chairman promised will appear in the commission's report.

"On the subject of regionalism," Rutherford said, "the commission stressed that federal programs cannot change the basic geographic features favoring milk production in one area over another." Farmers and industry leaders in the East and Midwest have criticized current policies for encouraging production in the West and Southwest.

The commission will support the basic framework of national dairy policy, including the price support program and the use of federal orders to govern milk marketing across much of the country, according to Rutherford. However, the commission will not, as others have, assign the need to save family farms to the purposes of either program. According to Rutherford, the commission found "family farm" impossible to define and therefore an inappropriate consideration for dairy policy.

"The commission intends to recommend policy benefitting the diverse mainstream of the dairy industry," he said. "Policy benefitting the entire industry will benefit family farms."

On other matters, the commission will endorse a continuation of the current quota system restricting the importation of many dairy products and will recommend additional research to determine the impact of current advertising and promotion programs on boosting sales, the chairman said.

Rutherford gave no hint of the commission's conclusions concerning bovine somatotropin, the controversial growth hormone product under development by major drug companies. Charting the impact of new technologies was another of the commission's appointed tasks.

The commission was authorized by the 1985 farm bill to report to Congress and the administration. All 18 members are dairy farmers who represent various regions of the country. They included Robert McSparran, president of Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, and Fred Butler, president of the Middle Atlantic Division of Dairymen Inc.

Rutherford promised the commission would present a unanimous report March 31. It has scheduled a press conference on Capitol Hill that day.

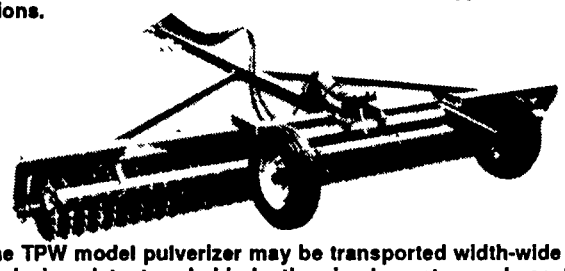
NEW TPW WIDTH-WISE TRANSPORT PULVERIZERS

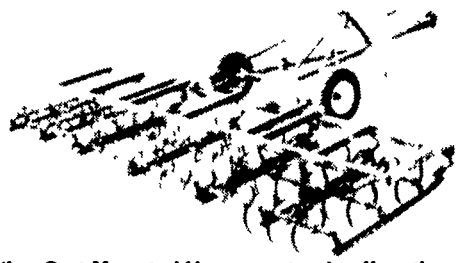
As the leading manufacturer of pulverizers, Brillion builds a wide range of single and multiple gang, as well as folding models. Sizes are available from 6' to 32'8", with a variety of roller designs and sizes to meet different soil types and conditions.



The TPW model pulverizer may be transported width-wide and is designed to tow behind other implements, such as field cultivators and disc harrows. The machine is raised from field to transport position, hydraulically, without detaching from other implements.

SPRING TOOTH HARROWS

The spring tooth harrow is one of the most basic secondary tillage tools in many parts of the country. It prepares a smooth, but more open seedbed. The surface is rough enough to soak up spring rains, but not too lumpy to slow plant emergence. In addition to this Cart-Mounted Harrow, Brillion also offers the wheel-mounted, high-clearance STR and STS series of spring tooth harrows in widths ranging from 8 to 20 feet.



The Brillion Cart-Mounted Harrow not only offers the advantage that allows each individual section of the harrow to follow the contour of the ground in the field, but also has a convenient cart that converts the machine to transport position for roadway travel. The strength of the wing hinges eliminates the need for telescoping tubes or cable supports. The sections raise hydraulically (with the furnished 3"x16" cylinder) for easy folding and trash removal. Brillion Cart-Mounted Harrows are available in 16', 20' and 24' sizes with optional spike tooth smoothener sections.

Enthusiasm Starts At NW 4-H Leaders Forum

BY CAROLYN HILSDON GILLES
Crawford Co. Correspondent

TITUSVILLE — Titusville's Cross Creek Resort was alive with enthusiasm as 70 volunteer 4-H leaders from seven counties gathered together for a weekend of learning and sharing at the annual Northwest Pennsylvania 4-H Leaders Forum.

Keynote speaker for the event was Frank Bortz of State College whose luncheon address echoed the theme, "Enthusiasm Starts Here!" Bortz, an entrepreneur who spent 25 years on county and state 4-H staffs, began his inspirational talk with the fact that a baby born today has a life expectancy of approximately 25,500 days. Said Bortz, "Life is just too short to be miserable or boring."

Bortz pointed out that too many people spend their lives wondering why they were born. He quoted Lincoln who spoke of a man that "died at 21 but was buried at 65" and he issued a challenge to 4-H to help young people learn to enjoy life. Said Bortz, "Enthusiasm makes the difference for life."

Bortz told the leaders that the reason he stayed on the 4-H staff for 25 years was illustrated in the story of a little boy who attended the "County 4-H Show" when Bortz was a new staff member. The boy had brought a straggly marigold plant to show, but his pride in it was unbounded. That boy made Bortz realize the value of helping a young person learn to do for himself and take pride in saying, "I grew these; these are mine." Said Bortz, "All of a sudden, the sky lit up for me!" He knew then what made 4-H so great.

Bortz cited a research experiment done in California where a random sample of fifth, sixth and seventh graders were tested to determine their potential for academic greatness. The tests were administered but the test results were burned. Then, without any relationship to test scores, three to four names were randomly picked from each class and teachers were advised by letter that these were the students who showed the greatest potential. Teachers were asked to observe these students and give an option of each student's potential at the end of the year. Without exception, each teacher confirmed the bogus test results and stated that these were indeed the students with the greatest academic potential. Said Bortz, "You are what you think!"

Bortz drove the point home with yet another story of a young man who met a famous minister and motivational speaker at an airport. He asked for the minister's advice on how to achieve the goal of 750 attendance at their local Sunday school. The minister told the man to take his wife and seclude themselves in a cabin in the woods for two weeks. While there, they were to write "1,500" with a stick in the dirt, over and over. They were to say "1,500" repeatedly to themselves and think "1,500" morning, noon and night.

If they lived, breathed and talked "1,500," when they went home and began to work on increasing enrollment, the minister told them, "You'll pass 750 like you never knew it was there."

Bortz ended his pep-talk with one final story. In a great cathedral of Europe, many had gathered to honor a man who had long played the organ there. After playing magnificently for the last time, the elderly man locked the organ, removed his key and handed it to none other than Johann Sebastian Bach. From the podium where he spoke, Bortz then held up a key in a gesture to 4-H leaders. "The key," said Bortz, "is passed to you. Those young people out there need to know that you love them, that you care about them, that you believe in them."

On the planning committee for the regional event were Extension Home Economists Phyllis Wright of Warren County and Rainy Linn of Venango County with volunteer leaders Petty Schreiber and Debra Glotz of Warren County and Susan Purdum, Judy Gilliland and Jeff Davis of Venango County.

A unique aspect of this forum, according to Home Economist Phyllis Wright is "Our own people are training our own people." State 4-H Specialist Robert Lewis was on hand to conduct workshops on "Motivation Through Recognition" and "Prepare Teens to Take the Lead," and 4-H Agents Carol Schurman of Indiana County and Carolyn Belczyk of Erie County spoke on "Learning Through 4-H Judging" and "Wildlife 4-H Project." Freelance artist Jan Knorr conducted a workshop on "Enthusiastic Posters."

But many workshops were conducted by adult and teen leaders eager to share their expertise with counterparts in other counties. Teen leaders Lisa Haehn and Dale McMillen of Warren County assisted Lewis in his Leadership Workshop. Crawford County Master 4-H Clothing Leaders Cheryl Weiderspahn and Marion Dronko led a workshop on 4-H Textiles and Clothing Projects. Venango County 4-H Leader Barbara Gross, assisted by Venango County National 4-H Congress alumni, led a workshop on "National 4-H Congress -- That's Enthusiasm." Erie County 4-H leaders Peg and Gerry Trichel led a workshop in "Hippology," a teaching tool to create enthusiasm among 4-Hers and increase their knowledge of horsemanship.

The intent of the Northwest Leaders Forum is to build upon county training programs and to act as a bridge to state and national training. Priorities for regional training are-- teaching skills, philosophy of 4-H, subject matter updates and personal development.

NW PA 4-H Leaders Answer Question

What Is Most Rewarding About Being A 4-H Leader

BY CAROLYN HILSDON GILLES
Crawford Co. Correspondent

Rick and Fran Reynolds (Mercer County Leaders): "Having the kids thank you for what you're doing. Their appreciation makes it worth the hassle... also sharing with the kids the knowledge that we have in the areas we pursue (horses, wood working and crafts)."

Betty Schreiber (Warren County Leader on NW Leadership Forum Planning Committee): "I enjoy working with the youth and watching them strive to make their best better and watching their confidence in themselves grow."

Rick and Fran Reynolds (Mercer County Leaders): "Having the kids thank you for what you're doing. Their appreciation makes it worth the hassle...also sharing with the kids the knowledge that we have in the areas we pursue (horses, wood working and crafts)."

Beth Wingard, Wendy Tharan and Becky Fulton (Clarion County Leaders): "Being 4-H Leaders helps us form bonds with family and friends. We enjoy the wholesome entertainment being a 4-H family offers."

Bob Mang (Erie County Horse Club Leader): "The primary importance is helping a child to grow and mature with leadership qualities, (helping them) to realize their own abilities to grow and mature within themselves and their own communities."

Marion Dronko and Cheryl Welderspahn (Crawford County Leaders and Master Clothing Volunteers): "It would have to be taking undeveloped and moldable children and funneling them into trains of thought that will make them worthwhile adults."

30 YEARS AGO
THIS WEEK

— The weather bureau was caught off-guard a second time last week as a load of wet heavy snow was dumped on Lancaster County. Beginning Wednesday evening, the storm was supposed to be only "snow flurries."

By the time the storm stopped Thursday, up to 30 inches of snow had fallen, causing thousands of dollars worth of damage, leaving some 75,000 homes without light and electric power and an equal number with no phone service.

— The lowest storage supply of Pennsylvania-produced potatoes in nine years was reported on Keystone State farms as of March 1, according to the State Department of Agriculture.

— Contrary to a national trend this spring, Pennsylvania farmers March 1 intentions are to plant about the same number of acres to spring crops as they did a year ago.

However Lancaster County farmers reported an intention to plant five percent fewer acres of tobacco than they did a year ago.

— Out of 35 rabies cases identified in Lancaster County during the past four years only two were found in dogs, according to State Department of Agriculture records.

Cows were hardest hit in the period 1954 through 1957, a total of 14 animal deaths being attributed to rabies. Foxes came second with 13 cases reported. There were five cases in cats, and one hog succumbed to the dreaded disease.

Last Call For Dairy Promotion Funds

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program has issued a "last call" on applications for local promotion funding for the second half of 1988, according to PDPP Promotion Specialist Laura Long. The deadline is April 30.

Upon application, she said, a $200 grant will be made available immediately to the qualifying organizations to purchase dairy products and other supplies needed for retail sampling promotions. All other funding will be made on a 50-50 matching basis.

Long noted that such matching funds may be used to purchase milk shake dispensers, storage cabinets, and other equipment used to dispense or merchandise dairy products. The stipulation is that all profits from such investments must be used for future dairy promotions.

To qualify, the local group must be a milk producer organization or a non-profit committee supervised by dairymen.

All interested organizations are advised to telephone Ms. Long at (717)787-6903 for complete guidelines and application forms.

Lancaster County Rabies Epidemic In Full Swing

BY PAT PURCELL

LANCASTER — "Lancaster County has the highest number of rabies cases in the state right now. There isn't much we can do about it, but let it run its course," said Pennsylvania Wildlife Conservation Officer Ted Fox.

The game commission is encouraging the public to take immediate precautions against the exposure to rabies and is discouraging people from taking animals to area labs for testing.

"The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, the Department of Health and the Game Commission has been monitoring the spread of rabies. We already know we have a rabies epidemic. We don't need to see the numbers and the labs don't need the added strain," said Ed Gosnell, Wildlife Conservation Officer.

The bottom line in the rabies epidemic according to Fox and Gosnell, is making the public aware of the danger. Human exposure to rabies is fatal if not treated. There are precautions people should be taking.

"If you see a gun in the road you don't pick it up and spin the chamber around, put to your head and pull the trigger. People are out there playing Russian roulette with rabies," said Gosnell.

An animal infected with rabies will exhibit abnormal behavior. It is unusual for animals which are usually out at night to be seen in the daylight, such as raccoons and skunks. Other signs are staggering, dumbness, docileness, friendliness or sickness.

Goznell cautions people to refrain from hiking in the woods and reminds the public to beware of docile and friendly wild animals. Aggressivness is characteristic of animal in the final stages of rabies.

What To Do

Avoid all human contact with the suspected animal. Do not touch alive animal or a dead animal. If an animal wanders into the barnyard or yard and is a threat, Fox and Gosnell advice is to shoot it, pick it up with a shovel and bury it where it cannot be dug up by other animals.

"Don't call me to pick them up. If you find a dead animal in an area where children or pets may come in contact with it, bury it. Leave the shovel in the sun for a few hours to kill the virus," explained Gosnell. "But if an animal is acting sick and is in a field, stay away from the thing. This is not open season."

Rabies is not something that happens to someone else. In Lancaster County for January, February and March there is a total of 36 confirmed cases which include 4 dairy animals, 1 horse, 2 dogs, 25 raccoons, 1 ground hog, 1 fox, and 2 skunks. "People must realize that a dog allowed to run lose, although it has a vaccination can transfer rabies to humans if if comes into contact with a rabid animal and then a human makes contact with the dog's saliva," explained Gosnell. "People are asking for trouble. Feeding pets at night outside only entices wild animals to come in contact with pets."

Any possibility of human contact with rabies the victim should immediately contact the Game Commission or the local police. It is fatal if not treated immediately.

"There is nothing we can do to stop the spread of rabies. What we must do is make the public aware of the danger and urge them to take caution. No matter what we do, it will take its course just like a flu would," explained Fox. "It is very, very bad in our area and everyone should be very careful not to get themselves in precarious positions."

Dr. Gemmill, D.V.M. of the West Lancaster Animal Hospital, disagrees with the Game Commission and finds the state monitoring system lacking.

"The state monitoring of rabies stinks. In effect they are doing nothing. There is a very vigorous discouragement by the game commission to have suspected animals tested. There is a rabies epidemic and at this point people should assume that every animal has rabies until proven otherwise.

"One of my technicians was recently having a picnic in Central Park when a skunk staggered out of the bushes in the midst of their picnic. Their solution was to shoot it and bury it,"said Gemmill."I believe the state is doing a real disservice by not doing more testing for rabies and know what real numbers are."

Bruce Reimer of the Pennsylvania State Health Department, said that any animal suspected of having rabies should be brought to a lab for testing.

"Any suspected case should be reported. We want an accurate testing. We do not want to be showing 33 reported cases in the county when in effect there are actually 83, and 50 have just not been reported. We must make the public aware of this very serious problem and we need to constantly re-emphasize the very real danger of exposure to rabies," said Reimer.

However, Gosnell and Fox agree, that whether there are 50 confirmed cases or 100 confirmed cases in the county, the bottom line is that there is a serious rabies epidemic in Lancaster County and that immediate precautions must be taken by all residents.

For farmers there is indemnity money available for livestock due to rabies, but it can only be cllected if dogs and other pets have been vaccinated against rabies. This includes any animal kept in the house, but it does not include farm cats. Many people view this as a major flaw in the law.

"I don't have any explanation for it except that it's politics. People are putting themselves, their family and their animals at risk by not having their animals vaccinated. And if they are not vaccinated, such as the barn cats then they shouldn't be on the farm. Right now it is too big a risk," cautions Dr. Gemmill. "People who have dairy cattle can vaccinate their herd for less than five dollars an animal. It is an expense, but it will cost them much less than replacing the animal or going through treatment if exposed to it."

Gemmill reported that three veterinarians in the Lancaster area have been exposed to rabies and have undergone the treatments. According to the State Health Department, there rabies spread to a dairy animal in the Bainbridge area, and one member of that family is under going treatment. The most recent case confirmed by the department of health was a dairy cow in Peach Bottom.

FARM FORUM OUR READERS WRITE

Editor:

At a time like this, when area dairy farmers are on the threshold of receiving the lowest price for their milk since 1978; one would think that all elements of the dairy industry would be uniting their efforts in an attempt to correct the adversaries facing dairy farmers. The current skirmish between Farmland Dairies and R.C.M.A. is extremely unfortunate. Can you imagine what we might be able to accomplish for dairy farmers if all the time, effort and money involved in this skirmish could be used to correct the real problems facing all of our dairy farmers.

I'm sure the dairy farmers currently shipping to Farmland Dairies are appreciative of the present 75 cent per cwt. premium being paid to them.

However, isolation or special premiums paid to a small sector of dairy farmers has never solved or come close to solving the over all problems.

Dairy industry leaders and most governmental officials have long recognized the need of marketwide pooling of milk within our federal milk marketing orders. In other words - give all dairy farmers within a marketing order an equal share of the market.

The philosophy of market wide pooling of all milk is the exact philosophy of R.C.M.A. The only difference with R.C.M.A. is —

1. They pool several markets together.

2. a) There is no premium on manufacturing milk

b) However, if the inequities facing dairy farmers are not corrected soon then attention must be given to establish a national premium on manufactured milk.

I have worked with various Farmland officials for nearly 20 years, and I must admit I am completely mystified by the position that Farmland Dairies has taken towards R.C.M.A.

I am even more mystified by Farmland's reasons for their position.

Recently advertisements and news releases issued by Farmland attempt to indicate that R.C.M.A. has done little - if anything - to inform their members of R.C.M.A. activities.

Actually, during the last several months several letters have gone to the independent producers belonging to R.C.M.A. Up to this point, the larger dairy cooperatives have assumed the responsibilities of informing their own members regarding R.C.M.A. If the cooperatives have failed to do this then R.C.M.A. is not directly responsible.

Farmland claims they are unable to obtain answers from R.C.M.A. I know there have been at least one or two meetings between R.C.M.A. and Farmland. Surely some answers must have been obtained.

I remember calling Farmland during 1985 and 1986 and was told by their officials, "we will discuss anything with you except R.C.M.A." (You can't find out answers that way.)

Farmland claims that dairy farmers pay for the expenses of the Board of Directors - organizers, etc.

During 1985, 1986 and 1987, no Board member of R.C.M.A. received any expense reimbursement. During 1988 a Board member can have his expenses reimbursed for Board meetings.

Farmland claims that the army of R.C.M.A. organizers have received reimbursement for their expenses. This is an insult to the hundreds of independent dairy farmers that have gone from farm to farm all the way from Maine to the southern part of Pennsylvania. These farmers received nothing from R.C.M.A. During 1988, R.C.M.A. has finally been able to pay some expenses to a limited number of temporary part time organizers.

It would be nice to eliminate the need of public relation firms and attorneys; however, they are just as necessary for R.C.M.A. during a skirmish as they are to Farmland. Whatever these costs are - they don't come out of producers direct milk check, but come from the premium money.

The total cost of running R.C.M.A. is not deducted from producers milk check. The cost comes from the premium money.

Editor, it would take all of your paper to fully answer Farmland's accusations. Instead, I would like to outline a typical R.C.M.A. meeting where the program was explained to dairy farmers or any one else present. (see explanation of RCMA meeting).

Explanation of R.C.M.A. Meeting	Did It Happen?
1. The membership of R.C.M.A. will consist of co-op members and independent dairy farmers.	Yes
2. The Board of Directors of R C.M.A. will consist of co-op directors and independent directors.	Yes
3. Independent producers will be assigned to a region.	Yes
4. The delegate body of R.C.M.A. will consist of independent and co-op delegates.	Yes
5. Monies from New England will be pooled with Order #2.	Yes Starting 11/1, 87
6. Cost of running R.C.M.A. will come from negotiated premiums -- not from producers milk checks.	Yes
7. Premium money will go to a special bank account under the supervision of a major accounting firm.	Yes
8. Premium money will be negotiated on fluid milk and not manufacturing milk for the present time.	Yes
9. If a milk handler fails to pay the premium, then the R.C.M.A. member's milk will be diverted.	Yes!
10. Example: negotiated premium a) Supposing a $1 per cwt premium was collected on all fluid milk. b) Supposing the market had a 50% Class I utilization, then the paid premium would be 50% fluid utilization = 50 cent per cwt. - 3 cent per cwt. (administration cost) 47 cents -- price to producer	This formula still exists.

These examples were used at all meetings that I attended across Pennsylvania.

I will not address Farmland's claims of their accomplishments in the marketplace, except that I recognize their importance of being there.

However, when they make the wild claim that they have not turned away producers because of oversupply, certainly someone has a short memory down there.

I very well remember scores of Farmland producers being given their official notice between 1977 and 1980. Most of these producers ended up with Eastern Milk Producers.

I would like to have Marc Goldman come out and talk to some of his former producers that were turned over to Scheps Cheese during 1983, and in many cases it was done in one day's time. Ask a producer who lost $40,000 by that transition if he would call it a "turning away."

Conclusion:

I recognize that Farmland was helpful in aiding farm organizations to establish better bonding laws in Pennsylvania.

They were also helpful with Eastern - Leprino project in South Waverly, PA. However, the farm members of Eastern were very helpful to Farmland with the Leprino project, as they paid Farmland a nice price for the plant in South Waverly. And in addition, Eastern became responsible to handle a large volume of Farmlands spring surplus plus making milk available to Farmland during the "short season."

I think it is high time for Farmland to resolve their differences with R.C.M.A. I think it is time we work to improve milk prices to all farmers. We must collect premiums on 100% of all fluid milk and pool the receipts through R.C.M.A.

In addition, many of us will be working on the inequities that are responsible for the failing prices paid to all dairy farmers.

Arden Tewksbury

Editor:

The discussion about RCMA is heating up and some normally levelheaded people are now saying we are "at war" with the Farmland Dairy and some other milk dealers who are refusing to pay over-order premiums charged by RCMA. We are NOT at war. War implies that we will wreak havoc and destroy our enemy. Milk dealers are not our enemies.

RCMA is disciplining Farmland Dairy and will proceed to do so with any other processor who refuses to pay a portion of the profits they are making from the consumers since the wholesale price of milk has declined. Retail prices of fluid milk in most of the Northeast US have remained strong, changing very little in the past few years. If some dealers do not wish to share those profits, we dairy farmers no longer wish to take whatever price we are offered, and therefore we are asking, through RCMA, for a fair portion of the difference between the widening wholesale and retail prices.

We are asking all dealers to pay the same fair premium, and they can offer anything above that amount in order to attract new supplies that they wish. We think it is

Blain-View Farm Donates Calf

BLAIN — Perry County's Junior Holstein Dairy Bowl Team placed first in the Pennsylvania Holstein Dairy Bowl Contest held during the PA State Holstein Convention in February. To help finance the team's trip to San Diego, California, to compete in the National Holstein Dairy Bowl Contest, Blain-View Sammy Penny, a Registered Holstein heifer, bred and owned by Beth Anne Rice of Blain-View Farm, Blain, has been donated to the team.

"Penny" will sell April 9 in the Supreme Creations Calf Sale to be held in the Ag Arena on the Penn State Campus. All proceeds from the sale of this heifer will go towards making the California trip a reality.

"Penny" is a daughter of Brooks-Twin Valiant Sammy-ET, a well known and respected sire in service at Sire Power, Inc. "Penny's" dam is sired by Sunny Craft Chief Spirit, is classified Good Plus 84, and has production records to 20,111 pounds of milk and 746 pounds of fat.

Beth Anne, her parents Nevin and Ann, her brother George, and grandmother Mary Rice, become the fifth Perry County dairy family to contribute the proceeds from the sale of a Registered Holstein to help finance Holstein activities for Junior Holstein breeders in Perry County. The Albright, Benner, Kriebel, and Ben Dum families donated animals in previous years, making it possible for Perry County Junior Holstein members to participate in state and national activities. The Rices' contribution to these youngsters continues a tradition that has proven to help produce many outstanding young people in Perry County's dairy industry.

Nesbitt Visits Old Friends During Holstein Convention

BY SALLY BAIR
Lancaster Co. Correspondent

LANCASTER — Last months anniversary convention of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association was like old home week, bringing together the leaders of the association's first 75 years.

Arthur W. Nesbitt was especially glad to be back in Pennsylvania, talking with old friends and relishing tales from his very active seven years as secretary-fieldman of the Association. He worked through the 1950's, a period of unprecedented growth for Pennsylvania Holstein Association.

Now president of Nasco International, Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin. Nesbitt remembers fondly his years working with Holstein breeders in Pennsylvania, but admits that his background had been on a Guernsey farm in Enon Valley, Lawrence County. Indeed, he says, "My mother thought she was losing a son," when he chose to accept the offer from the Holstein people. He still owns the family farm.

Nesbitt not only didn't grow up with Holsteins, he didn't major in dairy science. A graduate of the Penn State class of 1950, his classmates include many of today's well known names in the dairy industry, including Whitey McKown, Jim Pound, Obie Snider, Don Seipt, Clyde Wilson, Horace Mann, and others.

He recalls, "I wanted to be a county agent or a breed representative and I majored in ag economics, though I had more credits in dairy production." He said he chose those careers as options, because, "I knew Pennsylvania's strength in the dairy industry."

Indeed, he is one of those fortunate few who actually worked in both his chosen fields. His first job, upon graduation, was as an assistant county agent in Clarion County, a job he held for two years before moving on to the challenges of fieldman for the Holstein Association on January 1, 1952.

Nesbitt followed Jack Fairchild, whom he credits with "creating an organization of county organizations within the state. He did a great job and gave the Association a lot of momentum. He did so much to get it going and built a good foundation. I picked up the reigns."

It was on this foundation that Nesbitt built. His first office was in his home, and he remembers the Association having a budget of $12,000, a typewriter and one filing cabinet. He contrasted that with today's Association assets of over $5 million.

The location of the state office was Nesbitt's choice, and he says, "I chose State College because of the resources available from the University. We benefitted a great deal from that association."

Nesbitt says, "We developed the slogan "education, promotion and service - a program for all Holstein breeders."

A goal of the new secretary-fieldman was to expand membership in the Association, and he succeeded in going from 1,016 members in 1952 to 3,800 members seven and one half years later.

The success of the membership program, Nesbitt says, lay with their adoption of a program used by Kiwanis International and suggested to them by Clarence Lyons. That program was simply to have members talk to potential members in each county. It was during this time that the state and county memberships were combined, and Nesbitt says, "That really made the growth. We simply answered questions."

He added, "Breeders were waiting to be asked and to be informed. It was a great educational opportunity. We could tell them the advantages of Registered Holsteins, and how it would give them more value and help them run their business better."

The AI industry was growing at the same time, and Nesbitt says the establishment of the five Pennsylvania AI cooperatives and their growth helped to make dairymen more alert to the possibilities. He added, "DHIA was an important part of the program, also." He remembers that 600 pound herds were "on top of the pack."

There is no question that Nesbitt got to know the state very well. He traveled 50,000 miles a year, trying to make each of the 49 county organizations' meetings. "I traded Fords every year, and I got six cents a mile - that wasn't bad," Nesbitt says.

It was during Nesbitt's tenure that a series of state shows were organized. In 1954 there were seven shows with 800 head of cattle. They culminated in the first state Black and White show in Harrisburg. Up to that time, the Pennsylvania Farm Show had been the only showcase of Holstein cattle.

Nesbitt says, "It was the strength of the committees that made that work. There are givers and takers in this world, and we are very strong on givers." He said the 49 members of the state board were always very helpful, adding, "We had excellent attendance at board meetings, and all they received was their lunch."

One of the largest changes since his leadership years is the adoption of a "global marketing" program. Nesbitt says, "Instead of selling registered cattle to our neighbors, we are going around the world. Pennsylvania was an importing state then, with hundreds of cattle coming in from Canada. Now we are an exporting state."

A fact which hasn't changed over the years is that good dairymen continue to look at records to help make decisions.

It was also during Nesbitt's tenure that the "Harrisburg Association" was offering registration for Holstein Friesian cattle. This registration service offered to sketch calves for its members to help in registration. A move was underway to re-register these cattle with the National office or with the Canadian Association, and there were strong feelings over the matter.

Official meetings of the state association had always been held in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Farm Show, with a business meeting in the morning, lunch and a speaker and program in the afternoon. Nesbitt recalls that about 125 people attended. In 1955 they established the convention district arrangement that continues today, and the first meeting away from the Penn Harris Hotel was held in Greensburg. This attracted about 350 people, and, of course, set a tradition which continued with the convention at Willow Valley last week.

In 1955, the national convention came to Philadelphia, with the National Sale being held in Harrisburg. Nesbitt says, "I still get comments that that sale was one of the finest ever held."

The first monthly state publication came during that time, and was published in Ohio. Also, the All-Pennsylvania contest got underway, as well as leadership training schools for officers.

Classification was a part of Nesbitt's schedule, and he remembers that one classifier would come into the state for two weeks, three times a year. He said the state was divided into three districts and the schedule would be at 16-17 month intervals.

Nesbitt traveled with the official classifiers, and he said, "People were very good to me. I had good teachers, and it was a two way street. They were very receptive of ideas. We had discussions of everything from general farming to teenage problems."

When Nesbitt left the Association in 1959 to pursue a new career with Nasco, he had set a productive Association in motion for his successor Bill Nichol.

Nasco International is well known to farmers around the country for its mail order catalogues related to the industry. However, the catalogue familiar to farmers is just one of 17 published in their mail order division, raning from agriculture to education to arts and crafts to medical items. A second Nasco division does manufacturing, including defense related materials.

Nesbitt says he learned many business skills with the Holstein Association which help him today in the corporate world. He specifies, "I had the opportunity to establish goals for myself and the Association, and to meet them. I was able to develop certain member service programs that provided help to breeders, and I learned to develop a budget and stick with it. I don't think we ever overspent. I also learned to develop a plan for the year's activities, which we still do today."

Despite his heavy schedule as president of Nasco, Nesbitt remains interested and involved in the dairy industry. He remains treasurer of the Dairy Science Club after being long-time secretary, and is vice president of the World Dairy Expo. He is past president of the Dairy and Food Industry Supply Association, with offices in Chicago, and is vice chairman and chairman elect of the Wisconsin Manufacturers and Commerce.

Sulfa Drugs

WHAT STEPS SHOULD A PORK PRODUCER TAKE?

Both the National Pork Producers Council (NPC) and the American Association of Swine Practitioners (AASP) are recommending that pork producers voluntarily discontinue all use of sulfamethazine in swine feeds until questions of possible tumor-producing potential can be resolved.

Several tests are available for screening serum, urine, feed and manure for sulfa drugs (Sulfa-on-Site®, EZ-Screen®, Sulfa Swab Test). Since carry-over in mixing equipment and persistence in the environment can occur, test for sulfas if there is any suspicion of drug residues.

The NPPC and the ASSP have recommended that swine producers contact their veterinarian to discuss a prudent drug use program that includes an assessment of all drugs both feed and water additive as well as injectable. Many AASP veterinarians are providing a consultation on prudent drug use free of charge. You and your vet can map out a strategy for using needed drugs safely and eliminating unneeded drugs.

Pork promotion has done a great job of selling the consumer on the value of pork in a modern nutritional program. Producers need to eliminate the possibility of sulfa residues weakening consumer confidence in a great product!

and 3.3%. This herd was also the top herd in the state for milk production on 96 cows. The top herd in the state for lowest somatic cell counts went to A.M. Moor, Jr. on 198 cows with a count of 16,000.

The state as a whole averaged on 48 herds (4,815 cows), 17,352m 3.7% 642f 553p 269,000 somatic cell.

The Delaware Dairy Princess Contest was held in conjunction with the banquet. Coordinator Lynn Bullen assisted last year's Princess, Denise Emerson, crown the new Dairy Princess, Leslie Jane Moore.

After a brief introduction the four contestants; Billie Jo Collison, Judy Haman, Yolanda Grant and Leslie Moore each presented a skit dealing with the dairy industry. Leslie Moore from Bear had a skit centered on the cows ability to produce milk. Her factory concept had an amusing and informative theme.

Moore is the daughter of Carol and Robert Moore. Her background shows the love and devotion she has for the dairy industry. She was born and raised on a dairy farm where her father had Ayrshires and her grandfather, George Moore, had Holsteins. Her show animals netted many awards, including some from national shows. At age 17, she is presently attending Delcastle Technical High School where she was majoring in Medical Laboratory Assistant courses.

Moore is also employed as a cook at D's Restaurant. Her plans for the future include graduating and receiving her Medical Assistant Certificate. A future with the Navy as a Medical Assistant or going to college to further her education are on the horizon. She has been in 4-H for seven years and an active member of VICA, a Vocational Industrial Club of America.

Yolonda Grant was the Alternate from Milford. She is the daughter of Ulysses and Rachel. She has been an active member of Future Farmers of America and has won many awards in that organization. Her future plans include working for the Department of Agriculture, after graduating from the University of Delaware Parallel Program.

good to have the competition, and intend to do everything we can to keep efficient and fair dealers in business and even attract new proprietary handlers or initiate cooperative bottling operations.

If the RCMA Board of Directors and hired staff begins to call this a "war," we hope RCMA fails in its effort. We will have nothing to do with any effort to destroy the fragile balance, trust, and "zusammenarbeit" long established between farmers and milk handlers. On the other hand, we will not allow one or a few maverick dealers to destroy this relationship, either. We believe that by continuing to call Farmland and Hershey's and Wengerts, et al. to the table, and trusting God to give us wisdom in our negotiations, that peace and good will might prevail.

of these diseases are controllable, and in some cases eradication is possible with the proper research and application of that research in appropriate animal health or horticultural health programs."

Eckel cited the 1983 avian flu epidemic, which cost producers in Pennsylvania, Virginia, New Jersey, and Maryland millions of dollars, as a case where research and qualified staff persons could have helped control, and possibly avert, a crisis.

"We do not believe that adequate resources have been dedicated in the Administration's budget recommendations to assure the state's number-one business that animal and plant health will receive the priority it deserves," asserted Eckel. "We need to do everything within our power to avert another 'avian flu' type epidemic."

Tax reform was the last concern that Eckel discussed on Monday night. He urged legislators to act quickly in passing Governor Casey's proposed tax reforms. If passed, the law would eliminate local nuisance taxes, widen the income base authorized to be taxed by local taxing bodies, and place a maximum cap on total tax revenue authorized to be collected the first year after the tax reform measure would take effect.

Keith Eckel

Other priority issues for the PFA include commodity promotion, farm labor, littering, water quality, conservation, wildlife management, and insurance liability.

Earlier in the evening awards were presented to the electronic and print media that had best advanced the public's understanding of agriculture. The "Telling the Farming Story" awards went to "The Peoples Business", WQED, the Harrisburg "Patriot News", and Mary Klaus, news writer for the "Patriot News."

Proposed Amendments

Federal Orders 1, 2 and 4

BY JACK KIRKLAND and BLAIR SMITH
of Penn State University

UNIVERSITY PARK — In November, a petition that contained 5 proposed amendments to Federal Orders 1,2, and 4 was submitted to the USDA. The first two amendments would apply to all three orders and the last three would pertain only to Order 2. Four of the amendments deal with either milk product or milk plant classifications. The fifth deals with dairy farmers' milk prices and this is the only one we will discuss in this newsletter. This amendment would replace the "Louisville" type seasonal production incentive plan in Orders 1 and 2 (plus a coordinating amendment to Order 4) with a base-excess type plan similar to the one in Order 4. The components of the base-excess plan are as follows:

(1) An 8 month base plan with a 4 month base forming months of August through November.

(2) The base formed in August-November will apply during the following year in the 8 months of January through July, and December.

(3) The excess price with be the uniform price less $1, and the base price will be the uniform price plus a base premium that is generated from excess milk production. The premium would be calculated as: (Cwts of Excess milk in the market/Cwts of Base milk in the market), times the uniform price less the excess price (which always equals $1).

(4) Bases will be computed for each month by taking a producer's average daily production during the base forming months and multiplying it by the number of days in the month. We surmise that the four months production will be summed and divided by four to get a one month equivalent base.

(5) A producer that did not produce milk for at least 90 days during the base forming period would have the following percentages of their production considered as base milk: Jan, Feb, July, Dec. - 70%, Mar throughJune - 60%. These percentages shall apply as minimums for all producers in any applicable month.

(6) Bases will only be transferable in the case where a transfer of the farm production unit is made to a member of the immediate family of the base holder. Holders of base who form bona fide partnerships can combine their bases.

(7) A producer shifting their farm from regulation under one Order market to another should be able to use their production during the base forming months in any Order to determine their base in the Order to which they are delivering. (This involves the modification in Order 4).

The purpose of the base-excess plan amendment is to provide a greater incentive for farmers to reduce the seasonality of their milk production. How effective it will be remains to be seen. The effect of a base-excess plan on any individual dairy farmer depends on the seasonality of his/her milk production and how it compares with the seasonality of the market. In general, a dairy farmer whose milk production is highly seasonal, more so than the market, will see their milk receipts decrease. On the other hand, if a dairy farmer's milk production is less than the market seasonality, their milk receipts should increase. The magnitude of the decrease or increase in milk receipts of any individual dairy farmer depends on each individual production situation.

Currently, the time period for submitting proposals has been extended to March 25, 1988. Then the process of review, hearings, approval or nonapproval by the USDA, and a formal vote by producers lies ahead for the adoption of these amendments. We will keep you informed as matters pertaining to these amendments develop.

Farm Philosophy

GET READY TO SPRING

It's really funny. I used to get mad when the Ag news articles, written by "experts" of course, started to remind farmers that spring is coming. Heck, I didn't need reminding, I could feel it in my bones. You probably need no prompting either, but what else is there to be both sad and glad about at the same time?

My wealthy neighbors have returned from their winter flight to Florida, some of the other birds that like to migrate are eating at the feeder in the back yard, and the cows are looking over the barnyard fence at the tufts of green in the night-lot. Maybe it's only garlic green, but that doesn't matter to them. It is time for a change.

Those mixed feelings about the arrival of spring are understandable. The silos and haymows are showing some hollow spots, and the corn must be shoveled out of the corner of the crib. Some of those fat and lazy heifers are suddenly feeling their oats, and should be trumpeting the mating call any time. And besides, the long underwear gets itchy about now.

There is also a certain sadness about the passing of winter. Long, after-supper evenings, that gave us enough time to read all the adds in Lancaster Farming, (after the evening snooze) were real welcome. Just a few minor freeze-ups traumatized the winter chores, and we only had to plow the snow twice for the milk truck. The winter TV was better than usual, and we gathered plenty of fat, plus a few essential facts, on the Farm Banquet circuit. We're going to miss the winter.

But spring brings more than the fever. No need for sulfur and molasses when the seed catalogs flood the mailbox. Onion sets are already on hand, and the free space along the garden fence that I spaded last fall is nearly dry enough to stick them in. The grapes over the back porch, and the red raspberries behind the glasshouse are ready to trim. Any day now, a package of hope and hard work will arrive from Burpees.

Honeycombed wheat fields are ready for clover seed. Yes, some of us still start the hay crop that way, although there are ways thought to be better and more efficient. I've seen clover broadcast on the wheatfield in March, grow so thick that the ole' binder would hardly cut the wheat in June. Jack frost, opening and closing the pores of the earth, occurs only in spring.

The Quittapahilla Creek never freezes over. It is fed by too many springs, whose water flows in at 58 degrees. It takes several miles of exposure before it loses heat and freezes along the banks. The length of the Swatara and the width of the Susquehanna will finally dispel the heat from the Quittie's springs.

I think of the word "Spring", in it's many forms and meanings. It is a season, a flexible elastic device, a way to descend from ancestors, a flow of water from the ground, a leap into the air, a leak in a pipe, a lighthearted way of stepping, and a tide that encircles the Earth. It has so many meanings, none of them bad (except when a water pipe 'springs a leak')!

So, get ready to Spring, with all the implications of that good English word. Everything about the word implies life, renewal, progress and optomism. There is a newness in its meaning, creation in its activity, new miracles of openness and life. And the First Sunday after the first full moon in late March captures the whole range of meaning implied by the word "SPRING".

Wayne County Agronomy Day

HONESDALE — Wayne County Agronomy Day will be held Friday, March 25 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Extension Meeting Room, Courthouse, Honesdale.

The speakers will include Joseph McGahen, Corn Specialist, Penn State University — "An Economic Look at Corn Insect Control" and "Corn Grain & Silage Production"; Robert Hartzler, Weed Specialist, Penn State University — "How Herbicides Work and Resistant Weeds" and "A Look at Hard to Control Weeds"; Doug Beegle, Soil Nutrient Specialist, Penn State University — "Crop Deficiences — What To Do About Them"; James Garrahan, Pesticide Inspector for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture — "Restricted Use Pesticide Update Program"; and Don Overdorff, Extenstion Agent — "Pest Control in No-till Crop Production."

Joe McGahan has been working with corn production longer than he likes to admit. His experience with the states corn variety trials and the 5-Acre Corn Contest has provided a broad base outlook at the production of corn in Pa. You will find Dr. McGahan's insight refreshing and enlightening.

Robert Hartzler joined the Penn State staff in the fall of 1987. Dr. Hertzler studied agronomy at Purdue University, plant physiology at VPI and crop physiology at Iowa State University where he earned his PhD. You will find his understanding into how herbicides work and the reaction of plants to the different herbicides very interesting and helpful.

Douglas Beegle, Extension agronomist at Penn State since 1981 is responsible for soil fertility programs. Doug has been instrumental in many of the improvements made with the current soil test reporting methods at Penn State.

James Garrahan, Pesticide inspector for Pa. Dept. of Agr. will update the status of the Restricted Use Pesticide Certification Program. The content of this meeting will be worth 2 core credits, 3 category (1) credits, and 3 category (18) credits. This may be the last chance you will have this spring to acquire the necessary credits.

Light lunch served $2.50 — advanced registration requested. Call Extension Office — 253-5970.

The Story Behind Beary Klean Bear Shampoo

BY SALLY BAIR
Lancaster Co. Correspondent

MOUNT GRETNA — When they don't like a product, most people complain, and, perhaps, stop purchasing it. When Diana Lynn Orley didn't like the results she was getting on the hair of children who were using commercial baby shampoos, she manufactured her own!

Now, Beary Klean Bear shampoo is available at her shop and retail locations in central Pennsylvania to help make shampoo time not only fun, but also good for children's hair.

Lynn, as she likes to be called, operates Diana Lynn's Hair Salon, and finally got a shampoo that was acceptable to her about three years ago. She says quite honestly that the idea was a "gamble."

She says, "I found it challenging. I've never been sorry I did it, I'm only sorry I didn't do it sooner."

How does one go about formulating a product like shampoo to get the desired results? Lynn explains that she worked with a company in Minnesota that does custom formulations, and she tried new formulas over a period of a year and a half until she found one she felt was correct. She tried each new formulation for about 30 days before passing judgement. She chose the company on word-of-mouth recommendations beause it was known to be a small company that was extremely conscious of quality.

She says, "The formula stayed relatively the same, but the amounts of ingredients differed. It is not just the ingredients that are important, but the way the ingredients combine." She stressed the combining of ingredients as a key factor in getting the shampoo to fill her needs, and added, "You have to use mild ingredients to start with." She noted that the formulating company used a computer to vary the ingredients as they worked to achieve her optimum shampoo.

This sign draws customers to Lynn Orley's hair salon. A former 4-H'er, Lynn still takes an interest in her husband's work with contract show animals.

Lynn noted that though most people think the children's shampoos readily available on the market are designed to be mild, she has found them to cause tangles in children's hair when the hair is washed. She said she has found the consistent use of these shampoos to be very hard on children's hair. "The hair should remain tangle free when it is washed."

Her simple goal was to keep the hair in good condition and to make shampoo time enjoyable in her shop as well as at home. "Healthy hair is apparent when the hair is really shiny," Lynn notes. The shine comes from light reflecting off the cuticle layer of the hair. Some shampoo causes the cuticle layer to become frayed, much as a piece of yarn might fray when washed.

She adds, "Children like having their own shampoo. I wanted a shampoo that the kids would take the initiative and do their own shampooing." Though she has no children of her own, she adds with assurance, "And then they'll take a bath too."

Although her selling point stresses that it is a tear-free children's shampoo that is good for the hair, the appeal to children is the bear on the bottle which promotes it.

Lynn says, "I wanted to use a bear, because I wanted an animal that would appeal to boys or girls. But I didn't know what to call it." So to name her bear, she sponsored a contest for children under 10, and the winning entry was submitted by an 8-year-old boy. From that "Beary Klean Bear's" shampoo became a reality.

To develop the logo, Lynn worked with artists until she found one whom she felt understood her goal. Lynn said, "I had a concept. I wanted the bear to be happy and cushy."

The bear on the bottle is certainly "cushy," and has suds coming off his head where he appears to be shampooing his fur. Lynn is currently designing a new bottle for her shampoo which will be opaque and will enable the user to see how much shampoo is left as the amount goes down. She uses an orange fragrance, and a neutral color for the shampoo to keep its appeal for both sexes. The new bottle will have more color to it than the original bottle.

Marketing is a job which Lynn still personally oversees, although she has an able sales staff to help. Altogether, in her shop and in sales, she has nine people helping her. Lynn says, "My staff works really well together." She has been working for 18 years, but it is only the last five that she has had her own shop at the present location. She says, "It has really started to gel, and to come together."

This shop along Route 117 near Mount Gretna is the second she has owned on her own. Before that she worked for others. She now has customers as far away as Harrisburg, Virginia and New Jersey. She loves the independence of it, saying, "I like to do hair the way I like to do it." Her customers apparently approve, and keep coming back, even after they move from the area.

One of her helpful marketing tools is Beary Klean Bear himself, who makes appearances at hospitals, schools, nursery schools, retail outlets and at fair parades, where he is always a crowd pleaser.

The bear suit has been developed, and along with the suit, has come "Beary Klean Bear's" personality. Though he doesn't speak, Lynn says that he waves and hugs. A narrator accompanies the bear, and when they are in schools, the narrator explains all the things he does to get ready for school, including cleaning his hair. Often a volunteer from the audience will be used to demonstrate proper shampooing techniques.

4-H leader Kendy Allen books Beary Klean Bear, and 4-H'ers are often found inside the suit.

There are also miniature Beary Klean Bears, and when a child visits her shop. Lynn gives him one to hold as he gets his hair done. With the stuffed bear comes a "legend," which explains that the only times Beary Klean Bear cried was at bath time when he needed to have his fur washed. After he created his own shampoo, however, there were "no more tears from irritated eyes." Each of these bears is numbered, making them unique. They are created by dairy farm wife Ruby Bollinger, who also helps with sales.

Lynn recalls that one reason she created the bear is that, "I figured if Ronald McDonald could sell hamburgers, then maybe a bear can sell shampoo."

Though her shampoo is designed for children, Lynn says it is also good for colored hair on adults. She said many men like the shampoo, including her husband Cliff who uses it exclusively. She adds, "Hair type should be matched to shampoo. I can tell by touching someone's hair what should be used."

While she hopes to expand the regions in which the shampoo is available, Lynn is always looking for marketing ideas. "I have ideas fast, but I wait to decide until I have sifted through them thoroughly." She is considering working with florists to send baskets of flowers with a shampoo bottle among the blooms.

Lynn notes, "Sales are getting better all the time, but it takes a long time." She likes the idea of continuing to distribute the shampoo herself.

Throughout her efforts, Lynn says her husband has been very supportive. "He always thought it was a good idea, but he always wondered what I would do next."

Cliff works with beef animals, showing and fitting contract animals. He travels extensively, helping to organize sales and shows, so he sometimes missed new developments with the shampoo.

Lynn now is in a position to travel with him, something she couldn't do during her first years of owning her own business. "I go to cattle shows. I don't do anything physically, but I might see something that the others didn't notice when they take the cattle from the barns into different light. I talk to people. Our crew is excellent, so I don't have to do much."

Having been an active member of the Lancaster County 4-H Baby Beef Club, Lynn says, "I've been around it, and I never got away from it." She said her father always bought and sold livestock and it was a part of her life.

For Lynn, the challenge of developing the shampoo continues to be a learning experience. She is truly convinced, however, that she has created a product which is helpful to people, and she looks forward to the continuing challenge of marketing it.

Lynn Orley works with the hair of one of her regular customers, Kerra Allen, 6, a student at Mastersonville Elementary School.

This basket displays both the shampoo and the stuffed Beary Klean Bear who is used to help promote the shampoo for children.

Beary Klean Bear relaxes in Lynn Orley's hair salon near Mount Gretna. He helps to promote the shampoo named after him.

Lynn Orley is particular about keeping her shop in order. She has been at this location for five years, and has a staff of nine who help in the shop and with the marketing and distribution of her shampoo.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

When my husband mentioned going South to visit our children in March, I told him it was too early and April would be better. But a farmer figures he has to be home in plenty of time to start the spring work.

As it worked out, I was right because the weather gave us a cold reception. In the mornings, it was in the teens and for two days, as we drove through Tennessee, Kentucky and West Virginia, there was snow covering everything.

We visited Callaway Gardens in Georgia, and the prettiest flowers that we saw were in their screen presentation. The wonderful picnic lunch that our daughter, Judy, packed had to be eaten in our car. However, we did walk on a "holly trail," and saw the inside of a pioneer log cabin. A small vegetable garden had been started but we missed the 700 varieties of azaleas that bloom in the woodlands in April and May.

When we were in Memphis, our son and his family took us to Mud Island. We took a monorail to the entertainment center where we could walk one-half mile and see 1,000 miles of the Mississippi River in miniature. It was true to scale and showed the depth at various places. We were there on "Memphis Music Day" but again the cold weather kept many people from attending.

After church on Sunday, we started north and stopped at Madison, Tennessee for the night. We walked to a nearby restaurant for supper. The next day we drove through heavy flurries and had to use the lights on the car.

We visited "The Hermitage" which was the home of President, Andrew Jackson. It is set on 600 acres of rolling farm land and it was rebuilt after an 1834 fire. It is elegantly furnished and there is a formal garden that was designed for Rachel Jackson. It is here that the President and his family are buried. Jackson was a farmer, horse breeder, Superior Court Judge, Major General in the U.S. Army, member of U.S. House of Representatives and twice a U.S. Senator — all before becoming President.

In my next article, I'll tell you about our visit to the Corvette Assembly Plant in Bowling Green, Kentucky.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Just as sure as the sun rises earlier, daffodils poke leaf buds through moist March soil and robins put in their annual appearance, so comes another sign of rural springtime: The time-honored, public, farm sale.

A classic, country institution, farm sales combine the elements of business, education, information and social scene, all rolled into a single, one-stop-shop trip.

While livestock, real-estate, and household sales play year-round, equipment auction time runs in that slim stretch of season wedged between the end of winter's worst and early fieldwork, or between fall harvest-planting and the onset of Real Winter.

Thus, timing was the first consideration months ago, as The Farmers- older and younger- plotted strategy for our first ever, home-site, excess, outgrown, farm equipment sale.

Although what to sell occupied some debate, foundation lineup had pretty much worked itself out, based on changing equipment needs over the years. Marketing homework, however, was another story. That meant seizing newspaper sale pages as they arrived, for study of other offerings and prices. "Field trips" claimed additional time, attendance at numerous other sales to assess current used equipment retailing trends.

Or so they claimed. Any excuse to take in a farm sale ....

Now history, the sale etched in my mind the similarity of these events of rural Americana.

Nearly as important as the line-up of goods, it would seem, is that side offering known as the "food stand." Indeed, confirmed is my long-standing suspicion that a considerable bloc of sale-attendees are there to "fress." (That's "eat," if you're not familiar with local slang.)

Typical chilly, wind-whipped, farm sales are powered early on with gallons of hot coffee, sugary doughnuts and the ever-popular hot dog. No hot dog ever tastes better than those simmered in caldrons with dozens of their fellows, wrapped in a soft, fresh bun, tucked in with a blanket of tangy sauerkraut, and munched in time with the song of an auctioneer.

Those are carrying consumables, allowing participation in the auction action, visitin', and even bidding 'tween bites. Hot carry-arounds also help keep hands warm.

Not far into the action, fresh air sharpened appetites wander back to the food area, for more hearty fare of thick, rich homemade soups, burgers and barbeques, and a piece of pie, washed down by more coffee or cold soft drinks. Side bonus is that profits from these tasty goodies generally support community benefits.

Social aspect plays an equally large role in the farm sale scene. At any given time, save maybe the selling of some particularly "hot" item of interest, a good half of the crowd is probably busy addressing some side issue of agriculture. Topics range from merits of assorted equipment brands, weather assessments (too wet, dry, hot, cold, windy or still), politics, prices, private business negotiations, and a healthy dose of general gossip.

Kids tagging along to farm sales often grow bored as spectators and seek adventure elsewhere.

A pair of tousled-headed lads found their interest here on sale day on a bank of soft, loose soil. Accumulated grime, after hours playing there with toy soldiers and a scaled-to-size army tank, left little doubt as to their diversion tactics. Their grubbiness offered considerable amusement to our eldest, still speculating the welcome they got back home by a mother who'd possibly spent her day tidying up for the weekend.

Hosting a sale, I learned, equates to clean out, sort through, scrub over, shovel off, paint, polish and pick up. The shop was hardly recognizable for its neatness. Not only does one prepare equipment, but the old farmstead gets a sprucing up. It means early mornings, late nights, and solid-packed days in between. Plus regular chores to do as well.

"Gee, maybe you should do this again next year," pondered a voice as the sale was assessed at end of day.

The answer was a steady, solid, snore.

Free Program On More Food For Less Money

If you want your family to eat right but can't stretch the budget as far as you'd like, why not try a new approach. Bucks and Montgomery County Cooperative Extensions of Penn State University are offering a new series of free lessons called Eating Right is Basic.

The Lessons, which are federally funded, offers families on limited resources, information on food preparation, meal planning, food storage and sanitation, shopping skills, nutrition for family members, weight management, and gardening and food preservation. Clients are taught in small groups by a nutrition education adviser, who is part of the Bucks or Montgomery County Extension staff.

The Eating Right is Basic program also has a series for children that includes topics such as food preparation, food safety, food preservation, snack choices, nutrition and health and fitness. Children who enroll learn through 4-H clubs or groups led by volunteers, and will have the opportunity to attend a special summer day camp. The program is also available to teachers for in-school use.

EFNEP is administered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Penn State University and county extension offices. Instead of free food or food stamps, the program offers activities that develop the knowledge and skills to plan a healthful diet on a small budget.

If you or your child would like to enroll in EFNEP, you would like to lead a youth group or you are interested in the series for classroom use, contact the Expanded Food and Nutrition Program, call 345-3283.

Easter Sensations For The Innovative Hostess

Easter is the time to open your home to friends. Dress up your traditional ham with a maple-orange topping.

Easter is a joyous season that invites families to gather for a day of sharing. Like other holidays, Easter has its own traditional foods. Do you ever wonder how foods such as ham and colored eggs become associated with Easter? The Virginia Egg Council published a booklet describing these traditions and their origins. If you would like to learn about traditions other than those listed below, write for the booklet from the council at P.O. Box 552, Harrisonburg, Va. 22801.

Did you know that people in many parts of the world eat special cakes called hot cross buns during the Easter season? Each cake has a cross of icing on its crust. The cross represents the Crucifixion of Jesus. It has special meaning to Christians as a symbol of Christ's victory over death.

Ham celebrates the freedom of the New Law which came into effect through Jesus' resurrection; under the Old Law certain meats such as ham were forbidden.

The lamb represents Jesus by whose blood Christians are saved. Breads remind us of Jesus who is the true bread of everlasting life.

Eggs are one of springtime's sensations. Long associated with resurrection and the renewal of life, eggs play a vital role in Eastertime festivities and meal preparation.

Many children believe that an Easter bunny brings their Easter eggs. This belief stemmed from a German legend. A poor woman dyed some eggs during a famine and hid them in a nest as an Easter gift for her children. Just as the children discovered the nest, a big rabbit leaped away, causing the children to believe the rabbit brought the Easter eggs.

EASTER EGG BRAID

1 package (16-ounce) hot roll mix
3 tablespoons sugar
1½ teaspoons ground cinnamon
½ cup water
2 tablespoons butter
3 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
6 dyed raw eggs in a shell, at room temperature
½ cup confectioners' sugar, optional
2½ to 3 teaspoons milk, optional
1 teaspoon candy nonpareils, optional

Set aside 1 cup of the roll mix. In large bowl, stir together remaining mix, contents of yeast packet, 3 tablespoons sugar and cinnamon.

In small saucepan over medium heat, heat water and butter until very warm, 120-130 degrees. (Butter need not melt completely.) Add to reserved dry mixture along with 3 eggs and vanilla. Stir until well blended. Stir in enough of the remaining roll mix to make a soft dough. Knead on lightly floured surface 5 minutes.

Divide dough into 3 equal pieces. Roll each into a 24-inch strip. Loosely braid strips together. Place on lightly greased cookie sheet in an oval about 12x9-inches, pinching ends together to form continous braid. With sterilized needle, carefully pierce large ends of dyed raw eggs. Place eggs in horizontal positions between plaits of braid. Cover with clean towel. Let rise in warm place until doubled and finger pushed into dough will leave imprint, 20 to 30 minutes.

Bake in preheated 400 degrees until lightly browned, about 20 minutes. If desired, stir together confectioners' sugar and milk until smooth. Stir in candy nonpareils. Brush on bread. Cool on wire rack.

MAPLE-ORANGE BAKED HAM

3 pounds "fully cooked" boneless smoked ham
1 cup water
½ cup reduced-calorie orange marmalade
3 tablespoons maple syrup
1 teaspoon Dijon-style mustard
1 ounce shelled pecan halves
2 small oranges, each cut into 6 thin slices

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Remove and discard casing from ham. Using a sharp, pointed knife, score top of ham in a diamond pattern (cut long diagonal slashes, about 1½ -inches apart, in one direction, then cut across these slashes in other direction). Transfer ham to rack in roasting pan; insert meat thermometer into center of ham. Pour water into pan; bake for 45 minutes.

In small saucepan combine marmalade, syrup and mustard and cook over medium heat, stirring frequently, until mixture comes to a boil. Set sieve over small bowl. Force mixture through sieve into bowl; discard solids remaining in sieve.

Brush ½ of marmalade mixture over ham; bake for 25 minutes, basting with remaining marmalade mixture at 10-minute intervals. Arrange pecan halves on surface of ham, insert meat thermometer, and bake 10 minutes longer. Slice ham; transfer to serving platter and garnish with orange slices.

STUFFED CROWN ROAST OF PORK

½ loin of pork
6 large carrots
6 potatoes
potato bread stuffing
pineapple chunks, cherries

Slice down between the rib bones almost to the backbone. Place both ends together to form a circle. Fasten the ends together with meat skewers.

Prepare potato bread stuffing (enough to fill the circle) and set aside. Peel carrots and potatoes and keep them in water.

In a large roasting pan, place the pork roast. Fill the center of the roast with potato stuffing. Place carrots and potatoes in the pan around the roast. Add about 2 cups of water to the pan. Season with salt and pepper. Cover with aluminum foil and place in a 300 degree oven for 1 hour (check water frequently). Then uncover the roast and raise oven temperature to 425 degrees and roast an additional 20 minutes until nicely browned.

Remove roast and stuffing to a platter, placing potatoes and carrots around the roast. Prepare gravy from pan drippings. For serving, cut roast and stuffing as you would slice a pie. Garnish finished roast with pineapple chunks and cherries.

SWEET POTATO MAIN DISH

4 cups thinly sliced, unpeeled tart apples
4 cups thinly sliced, uncooked sweet potatoes
2 teaspoons instant minced onion
2 teaspoons salt
½ cup maple-blended syrup
½ cup apple juice
¼ cup melted butter
1 pound pork sausage
⅓ cup dry bread crumbs

Arrange alternate layers of apple and sweet potato slices in greased 2-quart casserole, sprinkling each layer with onion and salt.

Combine syrup, apple juice and butter; blend and pour over all. Cover and bake in moderate oven 350 degrees for 1 hour.

Meanwhile, crumble sausage into skillet and brown. Drain; mix with bread crumbs.

After one hour, uncover sweet potato-apple dish and spread with sausage mixture. Bake uncovered 20 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

ROSY HAM RING

3 pounds ground smoked ham
1 pound ground pork
2 eggs
1¾ cup graham cracker crumbs
1½ cup milk
½ teaspoon ground allspice
Tomato basting sauce:
Combine 1 can condensed tomato soup, ½ cup vinegar, ½ cup brown sugar and 1½ teaspoon prepared mustard.

Combine all ingredients except sauce; mix well. In a 16x11-inch baking pan, shape with hands to make a ring (or loaf) about 10-inches across. Pour half of the sauce over the meat ring.

Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) for 45 minutes; pour remaining sauce on the ham ring and bake 45 minutes longer, basting several times with sauce. Makes 12 to 14 servings.

You can mix this loaf ahead of time and freeze it. Allow a little longer cooking time. At serving time, fill the center of the ring with buttered peas, corn or succotash.

Cook bacon in large skillet; drain off fat. Measure fat and return ¼ cup to skillet. Add celery and onion; cook 1 minute. Blend in flour. Sensible Snacks For Children

BY DEBRA BRYAN
Wayne County Family Living Agent in Cooperation With Penn State And USDA

WAYNE CO. — Thinking of all the goodies you will fill your child's Easter basket with this year? I'd like to try to change your thinking this year and help make your child's Easter healthier. I'm not sure who decided candy and colored eggs were just right for filling Easter baskets, but I do know there are lots of other items that make excellent basket fillers.

My children have enjoyed books (usually featuring bunnies), crayons and coloring books filled with Easter pictures. They have also found pads of drawing and colored paper, markers, pencils, and Easter or animal stickers in their baskets Easter morning. An assortment of soft, cuddly stuffed rabbits have been found Easter morning sitting in baskets. We've found they stay around a lot longer than their chocolate cousins do, too. One year new-born Pound Puppies made their appearance at Easter. They are still being loved while the candy treats are long gone.

Toothbrushes in bright colors and the special toothpastes for children make good Easter basket presents. There will probably always be a few sweet treats in every Easter basket, but you can encourage your children to avoid tooth decay by brushing his or her teeth after these sweet treats.

Older children may enjoy receiving a new tape or record tucked in their basket. Jewelry, perfume, cologne, or hair ribbons also are colorful additions to Easter baskets.

For an older person you want to remember at Easter, fresh fruit makes a colorful, nutritious, and tasty way to fill a basket. Many older folks need to watch their fat and sugar intake, and fruit with its natural sweetness satisfies a sweet tooth without adding those unwanted fats and empty calories. Children enjoy fruits, too, so don't forget to add a juicy orange or grapes to their baskets, too.

I hope you'll consider cutting back on the amount of candy you put in Easter baskets this year and substitute some of the other things I've suggested. I don't think your children will be disappointed and you will know you've helped keep them strong and healthy by discouraging eating too many sweets.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

BY JOYCE BATTCHER

Colorful toppings give microwaved meats, poultry and casseroles a finished look. But if you're on a low-salt diet, many of these sauces, coatings or seasonings are on your "do not eat" list because they have a high sodium content. Instead of sacrificing color and flavor, switch to new low-sodium or naturally lower sodium store-bought products, or make your own low-sodium browning seasonings.

Read labels carefully-

Take time to look around next time you're in a large supermarket. Labels of most low-sodium foods are usually clearly marked "Salt-Free" or "Low Salt" to draw your attention. Many supermarkets flag low-sodium products. But it is important to compare sodium content of these specialty foods with regular foods and check labels of different brands.

Low-sodium soy, Worcestershire or steak sauce gives a pleasing browned look to microwave chops, roasts and stir-fry meat and poultry dishes. Read labels carefully, because the sodium content varies widely from brand to brand; and some brands list sodium per teaspoon; others list sodium per ½ teaspoon.

Low-sodium beef bouillon granules add a natural browned color and a subtle flavor to meats. Lightly rub granules into meat before microwaving. Price is almost double that of regular bouillon granules, but a little goes a long way when used as a browning-seasoning.

Micro Shake™ browning powder comes in salt free fish, chicken and meat flavors. Besides browning, it seals in juices and tenderizes. It, too, is sprinkled on and rubbed in before microwaving.

Kitchen Bouquet -- both the familiar sauce and the newer Microwave Browning Spray -- are quite low in sodium. Just brush (dilute regular sauce with water) or spray on meat and poultry.

Low-sodium yellow Cheddar cheese atop microwave casseroles gives a pleasing golden baked look. Low-salt catsup or barbecue sauce poured over meatloaf and hamburgers adds appeal. (These sauces have added sugar, however; so, when mixing them with other ingredients, you may need to adjust recipes.)

Try naturally low-sodium foods-

Some toppings are just naturally lower in salt. Natural Mozarella cheese contains 106mg sodium per ounce compared to American Process cheese at 406mg sodium.

There's paprika -- with only 1mg sodium per teaspoon -- a wonderful browning powder for microwaved meats and casserole toppings. Chili powder has only 26mg sodium per teaspoon; so it's another good choice. Compare the sodium content of these to 900 to 1,300 -- in the reddish-colored seasoned salts or barbecue powders that contain from 900 to 1,300mg sodium per teaspoon. Or compare them to prepared coating for meat and poultry that contains 595mg sodium pr ¼ envelope.

Make your own browning-seasonings-

Use colorful low-salt ingredients to make your own combinations of browning-seasonings. Use a combination of paprika with your favorite powdered herbs or spices. Use seasoning powders, such as onion or garlic powders, instead of flavored salts.

Try the topping recipes below. Low-Salt Chili Seasoning Mix gives a wonderful look and taste to beef, pork, chicken, hamburgers, chili and casseroles. For poultry, try Low-Salt Poultry Browning/Seasoning Mix. If you can't find low-sodium soy sauce in your supermarket, Low-Salt Soy Sauce Substitute is an alternative. It's lower in sodium than store-bought low-sodium soy sauce, but gives a lighter-brown color to microwaved meats and doesn't have quite the same real soy sauce flavor.

Low-Salt Chili Seasoning Mix

1 tablespoon chili powder
2 teaspoons ground cumin
1 teaspoon onion powder
1 teaspoon paprika
½ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ teaspoon ground oregano
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cayenne (optional)

Combine ingredients. Store tightly covered in cool dark place. Sprinkle and lightly rub onto meats before microwaving. For chili, sloppy Joes or casseroles, use 3 tablespoons for each pound of ground meat. Sprinkle seasoning on ground meat before microwaving. Makes 3 tablespoons (same as 1 package -- 1¼ or 1.25 oz.).

Each teaspoon: 10mg sodium.

Low-Salt Poultry Browning/Seasoning Mix

1 tablespoon paprika
1½ teaspoons ground poultry seasoning
1½ teaspoon onion powder

Combine ingredients. Store tightly covered in cool dark place. To use: lightly moisten whole poultry or parts with water, oil or melted butter. Then sprinkle on seasoning and lightly rub onto poultry before microwaving. Makes 2 tablespoons.

Each teaspoon- 5mg sodium.

Low-Salt Soy Sauce Substitute

⅓ cup water
1 tablespoon low-sodium beef bouillon granules
1½ teaspoon dark molasses
1½ teaspoons cider vinegar
½ teaspoon Kitchen Bouquet
Dash pepper

In microwave-safe measure, combine water and bouillon granules. Microwave (High) 30 to 45 seconds or until hot; stir to dissolve bouillon. Stir in remaining ingredients. For best flavor, make at least several hours ahead. Store tightly covered in refrigerator up to 2 weeks. To use: shake well; brush on meats and poultry before microwaving or use as you would use soy sauce for marinades and cooking. Makes 7 tablespoons.

Each teaspoon: 3mg sodium.

Question and answers

Q. I've read about deep-fat frying in a microwave. Do you recommend this?

A. I do not recommend this because it is dangerous, both to your microwave and to you. Most manufacturers do not recommend it either. Fat temperature is critical for proper deep-fat frying, but in a microwave, fat can overheat very quickly -- high enough for oil to burst into flames. Heated oil will bubble, especially when cold, moist food is added. The hot spattering oil can soil difficult-to-clean areas and damage plastic parts in the microwave and can burn the cook. Also, microwave-safe dishes may not be able to withstand the temperature of the hot oil. If there is a small scratch or chip in a dish, the dish could shatter from the hot oil.

School Teaches Maple Sugar Making

BY BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin Co. Correspondent

EDENVILLE — AT 9:00 on a recent Thursday morning, Beth Anne Blank, 14, and Hannah Burholder, 15, were working in a steam-filled wash-house a quarter of a mile from their classroom. Math books lay unopened on a table while the girls tended a large, rectangular evaporator full of maple sap. Beth Anne skimmed foam and dirt from the surface of the boiling sap. Then she checked the depth of the liquid with a stick.

"When it boils down to one inch, we put another milk can of sap in," she explained. "It takes about a milk can of sap an hour."

Beth Anne and Hannah were participating in a school project for grades six through nine at the Emmanuel Christian School in Edenville. Teacher Arlin Martin initiated the maple syrup making in February of 1987. He learned the art of making maple syrup in the mountains of West Virginia, where he lived for five years before coming to Edenville.

Under Martin's guidance and supervision, the Edenville pupils started their second season of making maple syrup the middle of February. They received permission from Blaine Brechbill, school patron, to use his wash-house and wood-burning oven for the subject.

The upper grade boys placed 114 taps in local sugar maples. One and a half inch deep holes were made with a power drill. One to five tap holes were made per tree, depending on the size of the tree. On stress with more than one tap hole, the boys connected the holes with plastic tubing so that the sap drains into a five gallon bucket set on the ground. Plastic gallon jugs were used on trees with a single tap hole.

Devon Landis drills a tap hole in a tree near the Edenville crossroads.

Eighth graders Devon Landis, left and Michael Meyers hook up tubing to connect tap holes on a sugar maple tree. The sap will drain into the white bucket.

According to eighth grader Joshua Burkholder, a gallon jug will fill with sap in one day if weather conditions are right -- cold overnight and warm during the day.

"The sap will run whenever the temperature gets above 32°," Martin said. "I like 45°-50° -- that's a good running day. The warmer it is, the better it runs."

Each morning, the sap is poured from the plastic containers on the trees into milk cans. Martin delivers the cans to the wash-house in his pick-up truck. He also delivers the first shift of evaporator-watchers the same way, but from then on, students are on their own for transportation. The second shift will leave the school on bicycles shortly before 10 a.m. Upon their arrival at the wash-house, the first shift will take the bikes and ride back to school. The shifts continue throughout the day, with Martin checking on the progress of the boiling operation two or three times.

The first trees of the 1988 sugar season were tapped February 15. The first sap collected yielded one gallon of syrup for every 30 gallons of sap; some collected later required 40 or more gallons of sap to make a gallon of syrup.

Three weeks into the season, the students had collected approximately 840 gallons of sap and boiled it down to 21 gallons of syrup. A maple syrup season usually lasts for four to six weeks, depending upon the weather, said Martin. "I don't feel this one will last that long, though," he added.

The students are involved in all phases of the operation, from cutting up wood salvaged from pallets to feed the fire under the 60-gallon evaporator to selling the finished product. In the process, they learn all the details of making maple syrup far more thoroughly than they would from studying about it in a textbook. The project also helps to develop math and bookkeeping skills. The students are responsible for the financial aspects of the project, with ninth grader Hannah serving as treasurer.

"This also stimulates their interest in nature," Martin said late one afternoon while keeping an eye on the evaporator. Most of the students had gone home, and he was finishing out the day's final batch of sap.

"We're going to have to take this off, Josh," he said to the student assisting him. "I can see there's going to be problems if we don't." So far, only one batch of sap -- the first one -- had scorched, but the flavor was not affected.

Martin and Joshua quickly lifted the evaporator off the fire, balancing it on two milk cans. Joshua held one end up while Martin opened the drain hole, and they drained the thickened sap into a bucket.

The syrup is not done when it comes off the fire; it will be boiled down further on a stove in the basement of the school.

The students enjoy the project, even though they have to make up any class work they miss while tending the evaporator, tapping trees or collecting sap. Friends and relatives of the students are happy to purchase the fresh, delicious syrup.

"This might become a yearly tradition" in Edenville, Martin said.

"Here it comes," one of the boys exclaimed. The sap started to drip out of the tubing before they had the bucket in place.

Eggs: Freshness Facts And Storage Tips

The term "farm-fresh eggs" may bring to mind a wicker basket laden with eggs just gathered from the hen house, but today's eggs, nestled in their supermarket cartons, are often more fresh than the eggs Granny used to gather. Improved production methods, more rapid handling, and faster transportation preserve the high quality we've come to expect.

Soon after they're laid, today's eggs are washed and sanitized in special solutions, packaged, and rushed off to large coolers. They're delivered to the market in refrigerated trucks and sold from refrigerated cases.

The homespun scene of a wire basket of eggs on the kitchen table may be appealing decor, but it's not a good way to store eggs after you've purchased them. Warm temperatures quickly reduce quality, so pop the eggs -- in their cartons -- into the main body of the refrigerator as soon as you get them home.

Storing eggs in their cartons helps to prevent moisture loss and keeps eggs from picking up undesirable flavors and odors from other foods. Raw shell eggs will keep at least five weeks in the refrigerator without significant loss in quality. Hard-cooked eggs should be returned, unpeeled, to their carton as soon after cooking as possible and used within a week.

If an egg has been properly handled, its actual age is of little importance. The most significant change occurs in the thickness of the white and the height of the yolk. As the egg ages, the white tends to become thinner and the yolk a bit flatter. These are the changes we refer to as "loss of quality". Refrigeration retards these changes. For this reason, a very "fresh" or "younger" egg will hold its shape better and look more attractive when poached or fried, but if you're not concerned about appearances, older eggs will do just fine. As a matter of fact, for hard-cooking, older eggs generally peel much more easily!

If you receive a windfall of eggs far beyond your capacity to use, consider freezing them -- not in the shell, though. Freeze only clean, fresh eggs.

To freeze egg whites, break and separate the eggs, being sure that no yolk gets in with the whites. Pour whites into freezer containers, seal tightly and label. Thaw frozen egg whites overnight in the refrigerator or under running cold water. Use just as you would use fresh egg whites, substituting 2 tablespoons thawed egg white for 1 Large fresh egg white.

To freeze egg yolks or whole eggs, keep in mind that egg yolks will thicken or gel when frozen and may become difficult to use in a recipe. To help retard this gelation, add either 1/8 teaspoon salt, 1½ teaspoons sugar or 1½ teaspoons corn syrup to each ¼ cup egg yolks (4 yolks) or whole eggs (2 whole eggs). When labeling the containers with the number of eggs frozen, be sure to note whether you've added salt (for use with main dishes) or sugar or corn syrup (for baking or desserts). Thaw as directed for whites. Substitute 1 tablespoon thawed egg yolk for 1 Large fresh yolk. Substitute 3 tablespoons thawed whole egg for 1 Large fresh whole egg.

Use thawed frozen eggs in dishes that are thoroughly cooked such as quiches, stratas, casseroles, cakes and breads.

The training will be Friday mornings April 29, May 6, 13, and 20 from 9:30 to noon at the New Castle County Cooperative Extension office in Newark. It will cover food safety, sources of nutrition information, clothing care, and household cleaning.

Volunteers need not have any previous experience or training. It is an opportunity for people to learn more about the science of household work. To apply for the volunteer training, call 451-1239 for an application. The deadline for applying is April 15.

At the time of application, there is a $5 registration fee to cover the cost of materials. Scholarships are available.

Shreds stalks yet won't plug up!

The perfect tool for ridge and minimum till

The Fuerst harrow cleans ridge tops, creating excellent seedbed. Unique "Spreading Action"® tines hug the soil at faster speeds to shred and evenly spread no-till stalks in the spring.

Dozens of uses:

The harrow used behind a disc or cultivator, incorporates herbicides in one pass. Used alone, it covers broadcasted seed, renovates, maintains pastures and more.

The harrow/cart (an optional harrow carrier as shown) follows tight turns, has folding wings for easy transport. Harrow and cart are available in 16 to 42 ft. widths.

"I believe the harrow works as good as a stalk shredder; it lifts and shatters the stalks and yet doesn't tear up the ground."

Stirring Up Some Homemade Brew

BY LOU ANN GOOD

MOUNT JOY — Wayne Erb likes to brag that his wife Joanne is his hired man. Some wives might resent that, but Wayne is quick to point out that he helps his wife with the housework as much as she helps him with their 45 cows and 120-acre Mount Joy farm.

"Marriage is give and take," he explained, so that's why he takes his turn cooking. Together they make a team in cooking and caring for their three little boys: Daniel, 4; Benjamin, 2; and Timothy 1. Baby number four is due to make a debut in April.

Celebrating their baby's birth will expose more of Wayne's cooking talent because he says, "Some people hand out cigars when their baby is born, but I'm not a smoker, so why should I hand them out? Others hand out candy bars, but why settle for candy bars when you can give cookies?"

Now Wayne's cookies are not just common, ordinary cookies. His are hugh, yummy and nutritious. But the most unique aspect of handing out cookies to celebrate their babies birth is the reason behind the flavor they choose. If the baby is a girl, the cookies will be Oatmeal and Molasses to signify that girls are sugar and spice and everything nice. Naturally, it follows that a boy's birth calls for Monster cookies.

Since the Erbs have three sons, he's never had the opportunity to hand out the Oatmeal and Molasses ones. It's probably a good thing because Wayne confides, "They're my favorite so I always eat them all before the baby is born. I don't know what I'd do if we had a girl."

Neither does his wife. "I like boys," she said. "I think it is neat having a bunch of boys."

The Erbs only have a few more weeks to see if they'll continue to carry on the boy tradition in their family. In the meantime, they're filling their freezer with Monster Cookies and—just in case and if Wayne can curb his appetite—with Oatmeal and Molasses Cookies.

Perhaps even more than being well-known for his cookies, Wayne is renown for his old fashioned homebrewed Root Beer, Sarsaparilla and Birch. The sodas are made from extract, yeast and sugar. A natural carbonation takes place when the yeast consumes a percentage of the sugar.

Wayne says he likes to make at least five gallons monthly so he can share it with friends and his family. Over the years he has perfected his beverage making. As Wayne mixed up a batch of Birch Beer, he explained that "It isn't hard. It just takes a little time." And with that statement he accidently spilled some on the kitchen floor. "It's messy," he said, "That's why more people do not make it."

The messiness doesn't necessarily stop with the mixing. Since the bottles are stored at room temperature for several days, the bottles may become overheated and burst. To cut down on accidents, the Erbs place towels beneath the stored bottles and they fill a small one-serving sized bottle to test for carbonation.

For readers who are interested in making one of the beverages, Wayne suggests that they buy the extract at grocery or mail-order stores. The Erbs reuse liter bottles in which they have purchased soft drinks. They believe that the green, glass bottles work best, but those are difficult to find since the soft drink companies now use plastic bottles.

Daniel, 4; and Benjamin, 2; decide it looks good. There only problem is trying to get a glass of their dad's homemade birch beer.

Joanne and Wayne Erb find cooking together or alone a rewarding experience.

According to Joanne Erb, making Monster cookies requires a huge mixing bowl.

Helpful Hints for Bottling

•Use fresh yeast.

•Use glass bottles, money-back deposit only, or plastic soda bottles with resealable caps.

•Rinse bottle after use for easy cleaning and reuse.

•Do not use glass or plastic gallon jugs.

•Do not use quart or half gallon juice jars, either plastic or glass. Do not use Mason jars.

Instructions for Beverages made from extract
(makes 4 gallons)

½ teaspoon yeast
1 bottle extract
8 cups sugar

Add enough water to ingredients to make 4 gallons of liquid.

Dissolve ½ teaspoon yeast in ½ cup warm water. Let stand 5 minutes or longer to dissolve, mix thoroughly before adding.

Shake extract bottle well. Combine extract and sugar in sufficient lukewarm water to dissolve sugar.

Add yeast mixture. Add water to make 4 gallons liquid.

Fill sterilzed bottles within 1 to ½ -inch of top. Depending on the bottles used, seal with hand capper or resealable caps. Bottles not sealed properly may become flat or sour.

Lay bottles on side to check for leaks. Age 2 to 4 days at room temperature. Then store in cooler, dark place. Total aging at least a week, 2 weeks improves flavor. As natural carbonation takes place, a slight yeast deposit will form on botom. This is not harmful but it does give an off flavor.

When the reusable soft drink bottles come out, Baby Timothy knows it's time to get into the cooking act also.

Take Care When Washing In Cold Water

Water temperature is one of the three primary elements of the laundry process; the other two being mechanical energy-- the action of your washing machine-- and chemical energy-- the action of your detergent.

Cold water, defined as water ranging from 70 to 100 degrees Fahrenheit, is inherently less effective for cleaning laundry than hot or warm water.

You may already know the importance of water temperature from your washing machine use-and-care guide or from detergent labels. If not, here is a quick run-down of the water temperature guide to follow when doing laundry:

Hot water is water of 130 degrees Fahrenheit or above, and should be used for permanent press and synthetics, white and colorfast cottons, heavily soiled items, and diapers. Hot water gives the best cleaning for heavy oil soils, and also helps prevent graying and yellowing.

Warm water is water of about 100 degrees Fahrenheit. It is recommended for dark or non-colorfast items, washable woolens, moderate soils and knits. Warm water is safe for fabric finishes and causes less fading and bleeding than hot water.

Cold water is best for lightly soiled fabrics, some non-colorfast items and some normally soiled items, if extra detergent is used.

Water can be too cold for effective washing. Powdered detergents should always be dissolved in warm water before adding to cold water wash. If you find this to be inconvenient, use a liquid detergent. Spots, stains and heavy oil soils should be pretreated and the longest wash time cycle should be used.

Water temperature is not a factor in rinsing-- cold rinses are recommended for all loads. Cold rinses save energy and help keep wrinkles from setting into fabrics. And while a load rinsed in cold water may take longer to dry than one rinsed in warm water, less energy is used during the longer drying time than would be used to heat the rinse water.

Steps To Take If You Are Overextended

Sound financial planning is not something that happens automatically. We learn it and sometimes we learn it the hard way. Credit cards, automatic tellers, instant installment plans, and even negative back balance accounts that automatically draw from your savings, can create havoc with even the best laid financial plans. A plan is only an intention, only a piece of paper -- it takes your action to work.

If you are overextended and are ready to re-establish a realistic financial plan, I suggest the following steps you can take to get yourself started on the right track.

* Determine the amount of your debt.
* Stop using credit cards.
* Devise a payment plan based on a well thought out budget.
* When you are tempted, tell yourself you cannot afford it and walk away.
* Cut expenses by being realistic about the differences between your wants and needs.
* Economize by controlling what you use and what others do for you.
* Increase the production of your own household. Plant a garden, do your own repairs, and exchange your services with others.
* Protect your credit rating. Your expenses may be high now, but do you really have the credit you may need in a true emergency? If you cannot pay back your creditors according to the terms you both agreed upon, contact your creditor and discuss your options. You may be able to refinance the debt, get an extension on your terms, reduce your debt by having the object repossessed. You may even declare bankruptcy which will not solve your problems but may make them more manageable for the time being.

If you are overextended, don t tell yourself you will solve the problem when you have some money. The time to act is now.

Learning To Live Alone

WEST CHESTER — "Divorce, widowhood and separation are probably the three most stressful events men and women face," says Marilyn Furry and Barbara Davis of Penn State.

Furry and Davis have developed a six-part series which discusses these and other issues. Called "Your New Life...Alone," the series offers practical suggestions for understanding grief, coping with money concerns, continuing a healthy lifestyle, and more.

"Your New Life...Alone" is available at no cost to you by contacting the Cooperative Extension office at 696-3500 (Chester Co.) or 565-9070 (Delaware Co.). Ask to be added to the "Your New Life...Alone" mailing list. Deadline: April 18, 1988. The first part of the series will be mailed the week of April 25th.

Question - How can I prevent cheesecake from cracking on top? F.S., East Rockaway, NY.

Answer - Bake cheesecake at a low temperature (300 to 325 degrees) and be sure that oven maintains an accurate temperature to allow proteins in the eggs and cream cheese to coagulate slowly and evenly. Also, place cake on middle rack of oven for even heat distribution.

Question - Is it safe to microwave popcorn in a paper bag? A.P., St. Paul, MN.

Answer - Probably not. Most microwave oven manufacturers do not recommend popping corn in a paper bag. Either use a popper or packaged corn designed for microwave use or pop the corn conventionally.

Question - If I bake chiffon cake in a 13x9x2-inch pan, do I have to invert it to cool the cake? Mrs. R.F., Garfield Heights, OH.

Answer - Both angel food and chiffon cakes have to be inverted during cooling to allow cake structure to set. For a 13x9x2-inch pan, support pan with several wooden, snap-type clothespins or balance pan between other pans of similar height. Be sure that cake top doesn't touch counter or cooling rack during cooling time.

Do you have a question? Write Dear Betty Crocker, Box 1113, Dept. Betty, Minneapolis, MN 55440.

TIP OF THE WEEK: Water at room temperature generally means 60 degrees F. to 80 degrees F.

This Easter, go "natural" and color eggs with nature's own dyes. Pick a dyestuff-- your choice of one material such as: red cabbage leaves (blue color), strong coffee (brown), onion skins (orange), Yellow Delicious apple peels (lavender), carrot tops (greenish yellow) or spinach (greyish gold/pink). Use your judgment about quantities-- that's part of the art! Add water to cover plus 1 tablespoon vinegar for each cup of water and simmer 20 minutes. Remove from heat and add hard-cooked eggs.

Don't pass over eggs as an inexpensive protein source. Two Large eggs provide 30% of the U.S. RDA for protein, which classifies them as a serving from the meat group of the major food categories.

Overlock Machines: Hot Item On The Home Sewing Market

BY DEBRA BRYANT
Wayne Co. Family Living Agent in cooperation with
Penn State and USDA

UNIVERSITY PARK — One of the hottest items in the home-sewing market is the overlock machine or serger. The serger is becoming increasingly popular because it allows the home sewer to sew faster and better. Sergers sew at about twice the speed of a regular machine and create a professional looking finish for garments made at home.

Sergers are not new. They have been used in factories for more than 20 years to sew all types of fabrics from knits to denims. About 5 years ago a smaller, lightweight version was introduced to the home sewing market. These machines cost approximately $400-$800 and look much like the industrial models. The industrial-looking design of the serger scares some people, but a few minutes using the machine usually cures them.

How Sergers Work

In one step the serger sews, overcasts, and trims. The serger completes all these jobs at double the speed of a regular machine. It is often called an overlock or over-edge machine because of the edge finishing it does. Seams made by a serger are identical to those found in ready-to-wear garments.

The presser foot and feed dog hold the fabric firmly and evenly. There is no slipping of one layer of fabric, so pinning becomes unnecessary for most work. It is also not necessary to raise and lower the presser foot to begin sewing. Thread tension on a serger is independent of the needle, so the tension is not affected by the presser foot position.

There are basically two types of sergers available now — the three-thread and four-thread models, but some companies are beginning to put a five-thread model on the market. The three-thread model uses one needle and the four thread uses two. These machines use loopers instead of bobbins. The threads are looped around the top thread as the machine sews.

Advantages of Sergers

The major advantages of sergers are speed and the professional look of the finished garment. Time is money for the professional dressmaker and valuable to the home sewer who is trying to balance work and family responsibilities. The home sewer can complete sewing projects more quickly and with more professional looking results.

Variety threads (pearl cotton, buttonhole twist, crochet threads, etc.) can be used to provide decorative edge stitching on collars, hems, necklines, pockets, and other edges. Sergers also make quick work of hemming napkins, tablecloths, etc. with a fine rolled hem or a narrow satin edge stitch. This stitch will also quickly finish ruffles, seams, hems, or the sheerest most delicate of fabrics.

Sergers handle most fabrics easily. They sew heavy wool coating as easily as sheer bridal fabrics, and finish lightweight fabrics with a minimum of puckers. Sergers also can be used to attach elastic, ribbing, make tucks, insert lace, and do blind-hemming.

Disadvantages of Sergers

The overlock machine uses much more thread than a conventional sewing machine. Because overlock machines sew so quickly, they need to be oiled frequently. Sergers must be cleaned often due to the great amount of lint that is created by the cutting blades.

Serger seams are automatically trimmed, so the seam cannot be taken out. All fitting and alterations must be done before serging the seam.

Sergers cannot make buttonholes, put in zippers, baste, or topstitch as can conventional sewing machines.

Before buying a serger, visit several dealers and ask for demonstrations, practice using the machine yourself if possible, and think about your sewing needs. Sergers offer the homesewer the possibility of completing professional looking garments in half the time, but they are rather expensive. Decide whether you sew enough to warrant investing in a machine.

The Wayne County Extension Service is sponsoring a serger demonstration by a factory representative on March 21. There will be two sessions offered from 1:00-3:00 p.m. and 7:00-9:00 p.m. in the basement of the Courthouse. All interested persons are welcome to attend.

Fourth graders from Rheems Elementary School learned that farming is not all working in the fields and getting your hands dirty. Todd Welty, left back row, explained why FFA is the largest youth organization in America.

Ag In The Classroom A Learning Experience

BY LOU ANN GOOD

RHEEMS (Lancaster Co.) — A few brave fourth graders at the Rheems Elementary School allowed a white rat to scamper up and down their arms. The rat was part of the educational studies of Ag In The Classroom, a program aimed at acquainting students with agricultural.

Since the pilot program began in 1984 in Penn Manor school district, it has received favorable response from both teachers and students. This year, fifteen of the 16 school districts in Lancaster county participated. Although most districts follow the same format of having farmers and a few animals visit their classrooms or by students taking field trips to local farms, Jane Eshelman, education coordinator for the county, said the Elizabethtown FFA decided to use the time to acquaint students with their program.

The rats demonstrated the importance of eating a well-balanced diet. Elizabethtown FFA students told elementary students that they experimented by taking five rats and putting them on special diets. The rats that ate the cafeteria lunches gained three to four times more weight, had healthier eye and fur color than those fed junk foods such as sugar coated cereal and chocolate. In fact, those with high sugar diets exhibited bizarre behavior such as going crazy with energy for ½

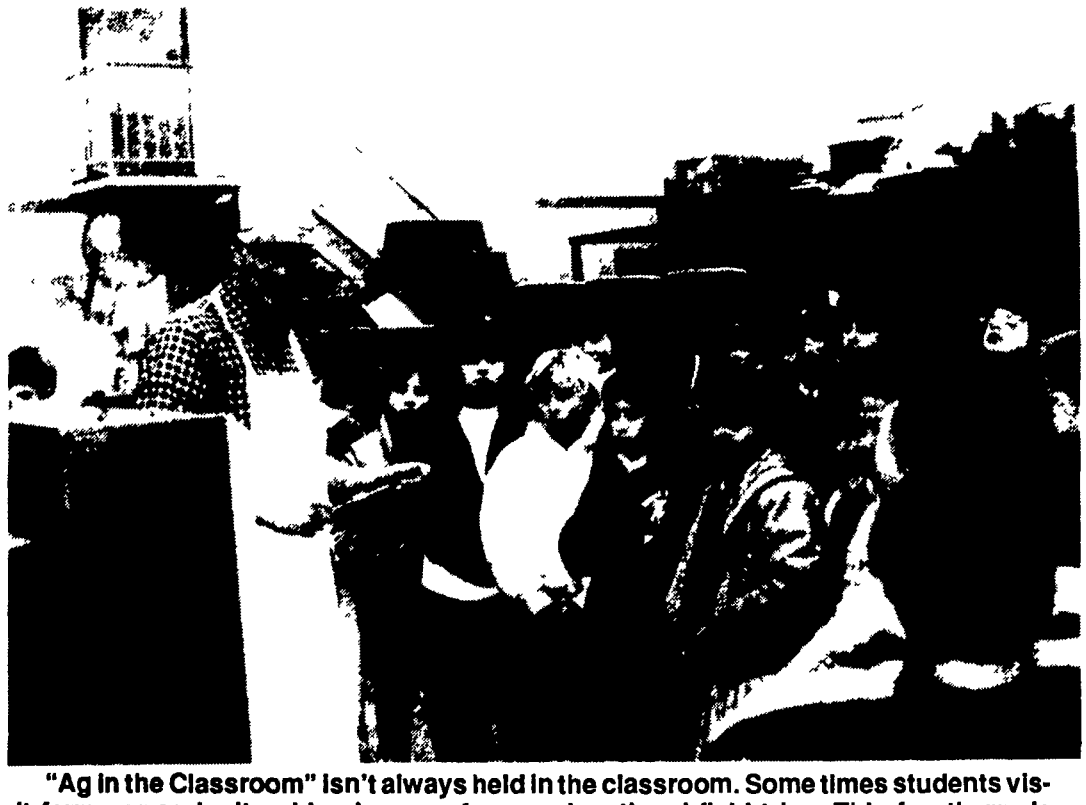
Elizabethtown FFA'ers showed the students how two different types of electricity work.



"Ag in the Classroom" isn't always held in the classroom. Some times students visit farms or agricultural businesses for an educational field trips. This fourth grade class at Leacock Elementary School, Intercourse, listened to Myron Stoltzfus of Stoltzfus Meats, Intercourse, tell about butchering. Teachers are Nancy Pfahler, Wanda Steffy and Linda Chronister.

How To Get The Most From Your Food Dollar

Are you the victor or the victim at the supermarket? Do you leave the store feeling like you got your money's worth? Or does food shopping seem filled with surprises - mostly unpleasant ones - particularly at the check-out counter? For many, the trip to the supermarket is like an ongoing battle from the time you find a convenient parking place until you struggle to pay the bill.

You can emerge victorious, if you follow some simple guidelines. Before you fight any battle, know what you are fighting for. The saying, "If you aim at nothing, you hit it every time," certainly applies here. Some worthy targets might include:

1) Selecting nutritious food by keeping the daily food requirements in mind... 4 servings of fruits and vegetables, 4 servings of bread and cereal, 2-4 servings of milk, and 2 servings of meat or alternatives are needed. Since sodas, cookies, candy and chips aren't food requirements, place these on low priority or skip these aisles entirely.

2) Providing for special family needs whether it be food low in calories, sugar, salt, or cholesterol. You might be choosing food for a toothless baby or a dentured-senior citizen.

3) Meeting your food budget allowance. Decide what portion of you income you want to use towards your food and stick to it. The Federal Government may be able to get by without a balanced budget, but if you overspend, it will rob money from other needed areas.

Take inventory of your supplies. Make a grocery list and clip the relevant coupons to it. Use coupons only if the bargain price is less than other brands of the same food.

Next, scout the newspaper for the store that has the best prices on the items you need. The USDA says 6% can be saved on weekly grocery bills by shopping the store specials. The average shopper spends $1.40 a minute, so limit your casualties by shopping only once a week.

A shopper with an empty stomach falls easy prey to tantalizing food, so go well-nourished. If whining children are your "Achilles heel", plan to shop without them. Take advantage of the store when it is least crowded, therefore allowing you to use your resources to the best advantage.

Enter the store ready to scour the shelves for the true bargains which aren't always the largest packages. Some packages seem large, but when you open the box, you discover the contents have settled leaving the package ½ to ⅔ full. Frozen food packages appear to be the same size, but close examination discloses the thickness varies and so does the weight from 8 to 11 ounces. Always divide the weight of the package into the price to make an accurate value comparison. If the store has unit pricing, the work is already done for you. Check the grocery shelf edge in small print which gives you the package cost as well as the cost per unit.

Beware of "Trojan horses" lurking in the aisles. The colorfully packaged children's cereal boast of vitamin fortification, but neglects to tell the amount of sugar they contain. Some of the most popular contain more than 50% sugar. If you wouldn't let your child add a half cup of sugar to a half bowl of cereal, why buy the cereal that does it for you. Check the box for the ingredients listed in descending order for clues.

Even veteran shoppers may be fooled by imitation or substitute products carefully disguised and placed next to the "real thing". The price is usually more attractive, but you may not be satisfied with the product.

Meat items attack a large portion of your food budget, so be on guard when selecting them. Consider the cost per meal of the meat by dividing the price by the number of meals you receive. Lean, boneless pieces of meat might be a better buy than lower-priced pieces with more bone or fat. A large roast or ham may seem expensive until you consider how many different meals it could provide.

Victory is at hand, so set out with confidence knowing you CAN win the food dollar battle.

Ag In The Classroom

hour after lunch and then falling into an exhausted sleep.

From this experience, the students not only gleaned the importance of eating a well-balanced diet but also an idea of what agricultural students do in their studies.

"Ag isn't all working in the fields and getting your hands dirty," said FFA'er Todd Welty. "FFA offers a lot of variety and learning."

Some of the hands-on learning that students demonstrated were power mechanics, equestrian skills, and electricity. FFA'er Bill Smith said these studies relate to agricultural because farmers need to wire the barn and fix tractors, chain saws and lawn mowers.

"Even if you aren't interested in farming," Welty told students, "you should look into taking ag classes because they can help you in many other areas." Welty spoke highly of the FFA program that offers a bright new future in agriculture and related fields and of the hands on learning experience and sense of accomplishment it gives students.

Welty told the students that FFA is the largest youth organization in America. The program promotes the future of farming through youth since 1926.

One of the brave students, George Fornwalt, allowed the laboratory rat to sit on his shoulder.

This Old Barn Isn't What It Used To Be

BY LOU ANN GOOD

NEWMANSTOWN — Most people fill their barns with animals and hay—but not Joe and Vicki Layser. They fill theirs with stenciling supplies. And the Layser's Painting and Stencil Barn isn't just any old rafter and hay barn. Theirs boasts oyster-colored drywall with stenciled walls and plush carpeting.

"It's a dream come true," Vicki said. "My husband always wanted a farm, and I wanted a stenciling shop." When the Laysers first looked at the Newmanstown farm, Vicki envisioned turning the barn into a stenciling shop, but she didn't mention it to her husband because he was too busy planning on getting three horses and baby beef for 4-H projects for their sons' Dane, 15; Dustin, 13; and Dylan, 9. In the end, they found the barn was large enough to fulfill both their dreams. They use the bottom for hay and the animals and the upstairs for the shop.

When the Laysers first moved into the place, which was previously owned by an Amish family, it had no electricity or plumbing. "We moved in the winter so it was like a winter camp out," Vicki said. "We had a lot of work to do and still do." They traveled back and forth to their parents's home in nearby Schaefferstown to take showers.

"Everybody thought we were crazy," Vicki recalled. But now that the landscaping, the barn and partial restoration to their home is completed, a sense of pride shines through as her eyes sweep across the tranquil countryside with its split-rail fence and the frame and the stone houses that the Laysers plan to combine into one large house.

Transforming their barn took a lot of work. The family project meant that Vicki and the boys put up insulating while Joe did the wiring. "I couldn't have done it without the boys," Vicki said. "They were great. They hauled loads of trash out and nailed down the floor boards." Since her husband has had a painting business for 14 years, his expertise in many of the remodeling jobs proved indispensable. "We did it all ourselves," Vicki said.

Whatever your need or desire, Vicki says, "You name it and I've got a stencil." As far as she knows, there are no other stencil shops in Lebanon County; she also knows that, for the would-be-stenciler, there is nothing as frustrating as not being able to find the right stencil. Vicki is out to change that. She carries extensive lines of stencils, especially wall borders.

Color makes a big difference in the eye appeal of stencils. Carol is sometimes disappointed with the colors that companies choose to display their stencils. She said, "Some stencils are so beautiful, but the colors do not do them justice." She recalled that she used the same stencil but changed the colors in two different rooms. The one gets lots of compliments while the other one is overlooked. Carol attributes the difference responses to the choice of colors.

For eight years, Vicki has been a stenciling fan. Her obsession with stenciling has not cooled, even with her store's extensive stock of stencils. She said, "It's a great way to decorate without the expense." Vicki admits that she tends to stencil a room and then in one year paint over it and stencil another design. "It's great for the person who likes change," she exclaimed.

Both sponges and brushes are used for stenciling. Vicki prefers sponges. She carries both the acrylic bottled paints and the self-sealing paint sticks. To use the sticks, Vicki dabs a circle of paint on a corner of the stencil and brushes the design on. Unlike the paint sticks, the bottled acrylics require that the paint be brushed out on paper towels.

With her typical enthusiasm, Vicki claims, "You can paint anything under the sun." Example of stenciled tablecloths, notecards, walls, light switches and crates are displayed in the barn. If that doesn't get customers's creative juices flowing, Vicki has a picture notebook with stenciling ideas.

The idea for the notebook originated from Vicki's own experience with craft shops. "I'd go in shops, see a stencil I liked but couldn't think of a way to use it," Vicki said. But after paging through magazines and reviewing past projects, new ideas surfaced. The photo notebook promises to whet customers' imaginations.

Vicki carries a wide variety of styles in a range of prices. As with other kinds of merchandise, "you get what you pay for," Vicki commented. "The more expensive stencils are easier to work with than the less expensive ones, which are made of thicker plastic. The thick plastic makes painting into crevices difficult."

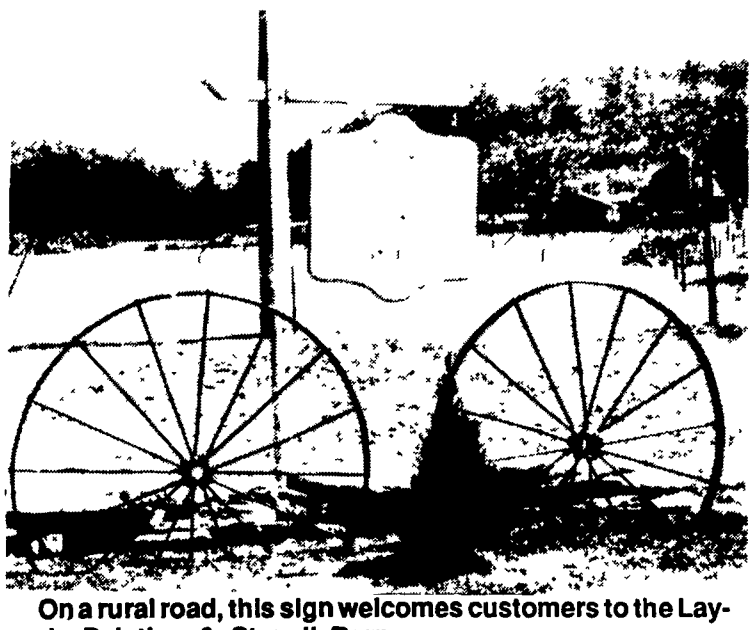
To complement her stenciling business, Vicki carries a line of country crafts made by her sister-in-law, Alice Kirchner. Although Alice does a large variety of craft techniques, her specialty is jointed teddy bears.

Besides giving classes, Vicki will give mini lessons to those who make purchases. Since Vicki continues her full-time job as Hamilton Bank Branch assistant manager, her shop hours are limited to 6 to 9 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday. Presently, Vicki offers two classes scheduled for Monday and Tuesday evenings. Both cost $12.

Basic stenciling - participants learn to stencil notecards, a wooden heart and a pot holder for their projects.

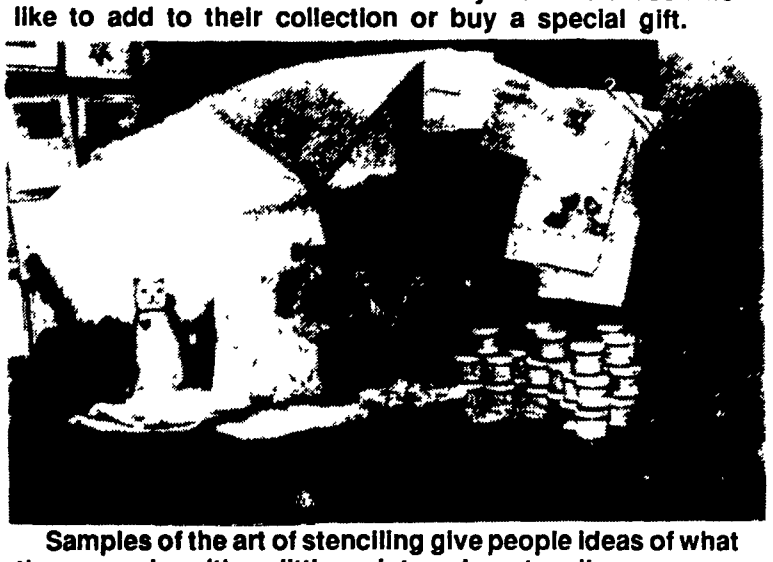
Wall stenciling - using acrylic paints and paint sticks, participants stencil designs on actual drywall.

Vicki checks over part of her stock. "It's the most extensive in the area," she said.



On a rural road, this sign welcomes customers to the Layser's Painting & Stencil Barn.

The stencil barn also offers country crafts to those who like to add to their collection or buy a special gift.



Samples of the art of stenciling give people ideas of what they can do with a little paint and a stencil.

Teens And Alcohol

Alcohol, the drug of choice for much of America's youth, is linked to most teenage automobile accidents and thousands of teenage drownings, suicides and injuries. Researchers, however, have begun to identify those teens at risk for alcohol abuse and to suggest ways to shape prevention programs.

"A Canadian study suggests that the earlier children use alcohol in the home, the earlier they will drink outside the home," says Dr. Patricia Nelson, University of Delaware Extension specialist on family and child development. "This report is contrary to earlier conclusions that this type of drinking did not lead to later alcohol problems."

Nelson says that longitudinal studies also indicate that children are beginning to drink at increasingly early ages. "Youngsters who start drinking before the age of 15 appear to be the strongest candidates for later alcohol abuse," the specialist says.

Youngsters who lack social skills may be at special risk, she adds, because "the easiest group to belong to is one that uses alcohol and other drugs."

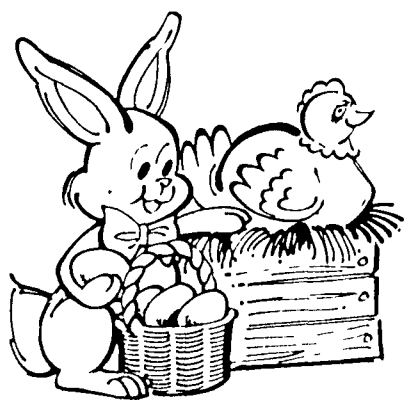
"Adolescents who spend most of their free time with their peers are more likely to use alcohol than those who spend most of their free time alone or with their family. Adolescents with strong bonds to family and school are less likely to be influenced by alcohol- and drug-using peers," Nelson says.

Although family and peers influence adolescent alcohol use, Nelson notes three other factors that have made alcohol abuse easier for teens in recent years. These are easier access to bars and liquor stores, relaxation of underage restrictions and the relative low cost of many alcoholic beverages.

In recent surveys of high school seniors, Nelson says, 66 percent report having used alcohol in the past month.

Researchers suggest targeting 8- to 12-year-olds for alcohol prevention messages. "Parents are the strongest factor in preventing alcohol abuse among this age group," Nelson says. "If they show disapproval of alcohol use by youth and provide positive role models by not using alcohol when under stress, parents can help youngsters resist peer and media pressures to use alcohol."

"Not all parents are aware that helping children develop social skills is really doing the kids another favor," the specialist says. "Extension has had a lot of experience working with this age group through 4-H clubs. Supportive leaders, peer interaction, and their club achievements help these preadolescents develop a strong sense of self esteem."



4-H HAPPENINGS

Northern Berks Dairy

The February meeting of tlw Northern Berks 4-H Dairy Club was held in the Shartlesville Grange Hall. President Michael Davis called the meeting to order.At roll call, the 21 members present named a dairy product.

The program consisted of a taste-testing contest of dairy and dairy imitation products. Presentations were given by Tracey and Beth Phillips of Centerport, and Laura Phillips of Mohrsville.

Wayne Co. Market Lamb, Hog

The Wayne County 4-H market lamb and market hog feeding projects will start April 1-15 when members put the animals on feed. Members would receive two lambs or two feeder pigs. Crossbred feeder pigs and wether lambs are recommended for this project, but ewe lambs also are permitted.

An effort is underway to identify area 4-H members that need assistance in acquiring suitable market lambs. The extension office will try to coordinate a group purchase of market lambs. The lambs would be housed at a farm in Wayne County. Members would be able to purchase two market lambs through a drawing or lottery involving the market lambs at this farm.

The extension office is accepting orders for 40 to 50 pound feeder pigs. The deadline for ordering pigs is March 31. The tentative delivery date is Friday, April 8. Members ordering feeder pigs are asked to pay a $50 deposit on each feeder pig. The actual price will be determined when they are delivered to the member's farm.

The extension also will maintain a list of area hog producers that may have feeder pigs for sale in April as well as a list of area sheep producers that have market lambs available for sale.

The market lambs and hogs must be on feed and under the 4-H member's care by. May 2.

For additional information, contact the extension office at 717/253-5970, extension 114.

Youth Leadership Program

The Chester County 4-H Program invites any youth, aged 12-19, to register for the Spring '88 Toastmaster's Youth Leadership Program. This is an eight-week program sponsored through Toastmaster's International, designed to help youth build confidence and strengthen communication skills. 88 Year Old Marathoner

Noel Johnson

Noel Johnson, 88 year old marathon runner, and World's Senior Boxing Champion obviously knows the secret of good health and a long life The international celebrity, author of the book "A Dud at 70 A Stud at 80", is delighted to talk about it "How did I do it? Its no secret," says Noel In the chapter "Everyone's Entitled To My Opinion," Noel tells what worked for him He credits a natural diet, a daily exercise regimen and Rocky Mountain Pollen, his favorite brand of bee pollen, for transforming him from a worn out old man with a life-threatening heart condition into a superbly conditioned racing machine

...Important Pollen Information...

"Health Freedom News" in an April 1984 article entitled "Bee Collected Pollen" stated bee pollen in a raw state with its outer husk intact cannot be digested by the human body "As a result bee pollen will pass through the body with the potent, pure pollen still encased in the grain However, the largest pollen distributor in the United States, Successful Life Products® is marketing a pollen blend harvested in the high desert regions of Arizona and elsewhere They have perfected a process that cracks or breaks the two outer husks enabling vital nutrients to be digested easily by the body Because of the rigid quality controls, they produce the finest bee pollen products in the world today"

Facts About Honeybee Pollen You Should Know . . . Fresh vs Processed

Nutrition conscious Americans must also be aware of the inferior quality of foreign pollens imported into this country Foreign techniques of preservation drastically reduce potency

Most of today's imported bee pollen has been microwaved to prolong shelf life The logistics of harvesting and shipping bee pollen from abroad results in Americans purchasing at least five-month old pollen Older pollen from foreign sources also initially suffers a great loss of nutrients due to the necessary drying processed (i e, baked, heated, microwaved, hot-aired or sun dried) of pollen harvested in humid climates–plus an additional 50% loss of nutrient content due to age, improper storage and shipment without refrigeration One year old bee pollen (unrefrigerated) loses 76% of its effectiveness due to large losses in the early month caused by improper storage (without refrigeration)

Conclusion: If you want the best bee pollen, do not buy foreign-imported bee pollen!

Rocky Mountain™ Bee Pollen Granules Are The Very Best!

Ag Secretary Urges Vote To Retain Beef Check-Off

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Boyd E. Wolff this week urged Pennsylvania's farmers to vote to retain the 1-dollar beef check-off. Beef, dairy, and veal producers will decide the future of the check-off in a national referendum on May 10th.

The check-off and the referendum were created by the Beef Promotion and Research Act of 1985. That federal law enables the beef industry to operate a program that provides beef promotion, research, and consumer information. The program is funded by a 1-dollar per head check-off.

"This important national effort is changing consumer attitudes," said Wolff, "More and more Americans are learning beef is an important part of a well-balanced diet.

"The beef check-off is controlled by producers who are the beneficiaries of the program. Smart producers know they need research to help tailor production to consumer tastes. They also know they need promotional programs to capture consumer attention and understanding.

"The check-off provides point-of-purchase promotions in retail food markets and those efforts are helping turn the market around in favor of beef producers."

Illinois Farmer Wins His Sixth Yield Contest

WATSEKA, IL — Walter "Duke" Hasselbring's plot entry of 251.6622 bushels per acre earned first place in the National Corn Growers Association's Corn Yield Contest, Class AA, Non-Irrigated Division.

Hasselbring, who farms 1,800 acres near Watseka, Ill., and runs a 120 cow-calf and buffalo operation, wasn't surprised with his winning entry. "We had a pretty good season, so we thought we might have something this year," he modestly admits. "I knew it would make over 200 (bushels per acre), but I didn't know by how much."

This is Duke's sixth national title in the Class AA, Non-Irrigated Division. In 1973 he took third, but he prefected his "recipe" to nail down first place honors in '75, '76, '78, '81, '84 and 1987.

Every win Hasselbring has chalked up has been with a Gutwein hybrid, and this year was no different. He planted his official 10-acre plot with Gutwein 2605, a 111-day hybrid.

What's the key to Hasselbring's success? "I begin with a good seed and take a little extra time in all phases of the corn growing process, and test the variables," he explains. "you have to find out what works on your farm over the years, and take the time to get all the little factors right. This year, the Gutwein 2605 I planted really responded to that little extra." With all those trophies to prove his point, who can argue?

SLICK CONCRETE CAN BE ROUGHENED

SCABBLING is an effective way to avoid unnecessary losses of cattle. The SCABBLER makes bands about two inches wide approximately 1/8" to 3/16 in. depth. This gives sufficient area for good footing while allowing you to scrape the smooth surface as before. It is near enough to the surface to give your cows full advantage of the roughness and deep enough to remain effective for years. It greatly aids in heat detection.

And the good news is that it is reasonably priced. You have the choice of doing it yourself or having us do it for you. We offer service right to your door. Call us for more details.

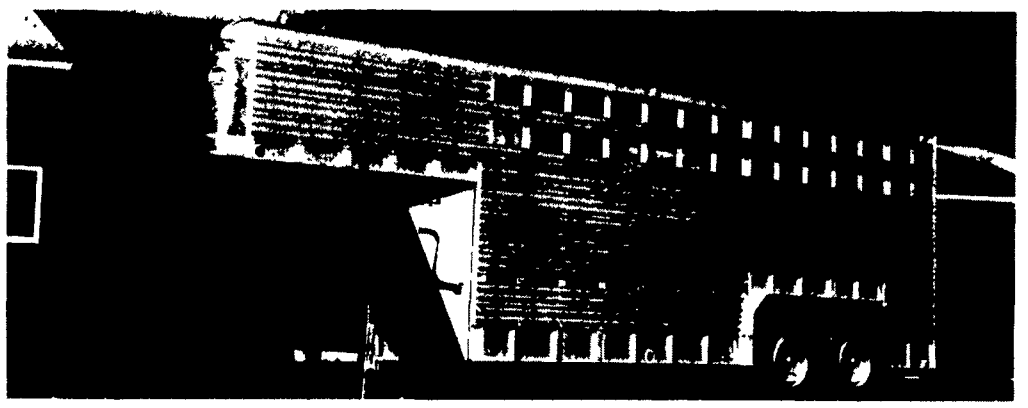
ALUMINUM GOOSENECK TRAILERS

EBY BLUE BALL, PA



20' Gooseneck Trailer

A versatile, lightweight, Eby aluminum stock trailer is built to provide years of maintenance free service. An Eby trailer is custom built to fit your individual hauling needs - No mass production! We use only quality components and strong alloy aluminum to manufacture what may be the last trailer you'll ever buy.

- LIGHTWEIGHT - Eby stock trailers are 25-35% lighter than comparable steel trailers. Less weight means better fuel mileage or increased payload.
- MAINTENANCE - Eby aluminum trailers won't rust. Welding and painting can cost you dollars in down time and repairs.
- DURABILITY - Eby trailers are built tough. Quality components and 6061 alloy aluminum provide the ruggedness required in a livestock trailer.

Making The World A Better Place

BY LISA RISSER

LANCASTER — Liz Chapman is changing the world we live in. Not in a philosophically profound way, but rather in a practical, prudent manner. As a nutrient-management scientist for the Lancaster County Conservation District, she is working with farmers to develop manure-management plans.

The people Liz works with are farmers who have signed a Chesapeake Bay Program contract, which has a 10-year lifespan. Each farmer receives one plan unless major changes occur in his manure's composition or storage or in his crop selection.

The first thing Liz does after her initial contact is interview the farmer. At this time she explains what a nutrient-management plan is as well as finds out how manure is stored, how it is spread and how often and what crops have been and will be planted in each field. She collects a soil-test result that is no older than three years and leaves behind a manure kit, which a farmer uses to collect a manure sample and have it sent to be analyzed.

"After the farmer sends the results of the manure analysis, I write up a nutrient-management plan," explained Liz. "I look at the nutrients supplied by the manure and decide what kind of fertilizer they need to supplement with. Or, in some cases they may have excess manure."

Excess manure means that the crops can't use all of the nutrients that the manure supplies.

"I haven't had any farms so far with excess manure, but I know there are some under contract," Liz said. "It's becoming a real problem. If a farmer has excess manure, he's required under the contract to move it to where there is not an excess of manure. But it's expensive to haul manure. We need to find a cost-effective way to deal with manure."

The nutrients that Liz concentrates on are nitrogen, phosphorous, and potash. Nitrogen is her biggest concern. "Fields normally have high levels of phosphorous and potash, but that is not as big a concern. We're concerned about nitrogen levels. We want the nitrogen that is put into the soil to be used by the plants and not to be washed into the water."

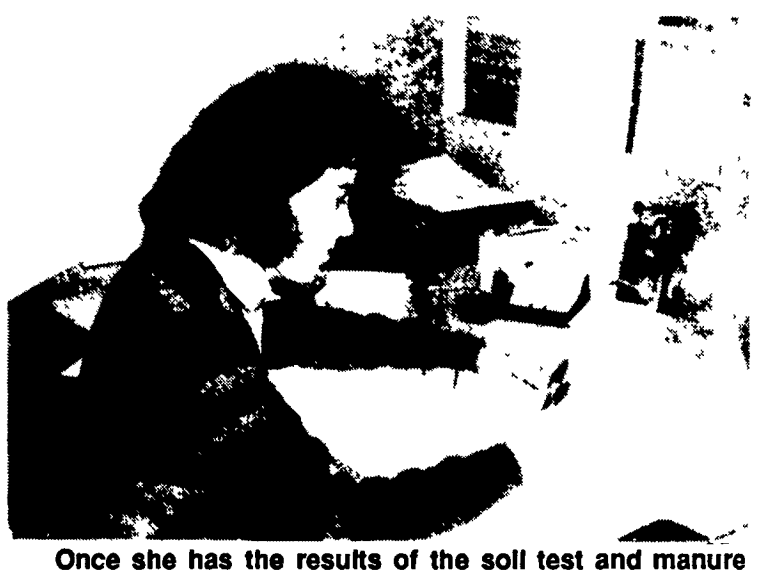
Liz's concern for farmers and the environment has its roots in the Lancaster County farm where she spent a great deal of time growing up. Her father was a partner in a farrow-to-finish hog operation next to which the family lived. She and her younger sister raised and showed market hogs and sheep while in 4-H. "We did well," Liz admited. "We had grand champion hogs at several local fairs."

An '83 graduate of Manheim Central, Liz went on to Penn State and earned a degree in forestry. While at college, not only did she learn about the environment, but she learned about love: her forestry lab partner, Paul Shaffer, is now her fiance.

Liz considers her work a public service. "I'd say we offer a service to the public. It all comes down to protecting water resources. The program is called Chesapeake Bay, but we have to be concerned about our local water resources too."

Liz and the farmers she is dealing with are working hard to improve their land and water. They're doing their bit to make our world a better place in which to live.

Liz interviewed Robert Hoffines, a Marietta-area poultry and steer farmer, about his farm and manure-handling practices.



Once she has the results of the soil test and manure analysis in front of her, Liz adds it to her other information to tailor a nutrient-management plan for a farmer.

Technologies Available To Protect, Preserve Environment

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Corn growers face the most pressing problem protecting the environment from agricultural contaminants, but they also will "have the easiest time dealing with the issue if they use the technologies available," according to Dr. Charles M. Benbrook, executive director, Board of Agriculture, National Research Council, National Academy of Sciences.

Benbrook and Dr. Earl C. Spurrier, vice president of Regulatory Affairs for the National Agricultral Chemicals Association, addressed a breakout session on "Protecting and Preserving our Environment" recently, at the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) annual Corn Classic.

Benbrook, who runs a diversified family farm outside Washington, DC, said nitrogen and nitrate contamination of shallow aquifers will prove a more significant problem nationally for corn producers than pesticide pollution, which he called limited and localized. Available remedies include ridge till as well as banded, split and spot injection applications of nitrogen.

Pesticide pollution problems can be reduced by adoption of integrated pest management (IPM) practices, which can cut herbicide usage by 15 to 60 percent and insecticide use by 70 to 80 percent in ten years. IPM's judicious management of agricultural chemicals will not only save farmers money in the short run, but will keep useful chemicals on the market in the long run, Benbrook said.

"The more pesticides lost to regulators the worse the resistance problem becomes," he said. Calling resistance " a very serious problem", Benbrook noted that no major new classes of pesticides are in the pipeline to replace the virtually ineffective fungicides and pyrethroids now on the market.

In other remarks Benbrook praised the EPA Groundwater Strategy Report released today as a "careful job" which will allow growers to work with states to save useful chemicals. He also called Sen. Robert Dole's (R-KS) new ECARP bill "the guts of the 1990 Conservation Title of the Farm Bill. It establishes a second conservatin reserve which will include land troubled by salinity drainage and groundwater contamination as well as soil loss. Wildlife and administration of the conservation title are also addressed.

Spurrier updated participants on the Endangered Species Act, container and agricultural chemicals waste disposal bulk transfer systems and material safety data sheets. Noting that over 2.8 million pesticide containers were used in Iowa in 1985, he calculated that a mere 2-ounce residue of active ingredients in each container would amount to a 172,652-pound or $1.3 million loss for farmers. The obvious economic motive for environmental protection must be matched by pragmatic regulations which allow for input from all affected parties, he said.

THE ONE SPREADER FOR A TWO-SPREADER FARM

A Gehl 300 Series Scavenger® II manure spreader handles all types of manure. It saves you time and money by bridging the gap between liquid and solid manure handling. It's the one tough, reliable machine built to cut right through your manure spreading problems. It's available in five sizes — from 912 to 2925 gallon capacities — so you can choose the one that best meets your operation's specialized needs.

Gehl has a patented, exclusive hydraulically raised and lowered internal auger to handle pen-packed material. That's why Gehl stands apart from the rest!

Manure from confinement housing can be quickly and easily loaded and delivered to your spreader with a versatile Gehl skid loader. The heaviest loads are no problem with a Scavenger® II manure spreader. It's built with heavy duty chain drive and rugged construction throughout. Your first glance will tell you the Scavenger® II is unlike any spreader you've ever seen.

Handles All Kinds Of Manure - Liquid, Semi-Solid, Pen Packed, Even Frozen

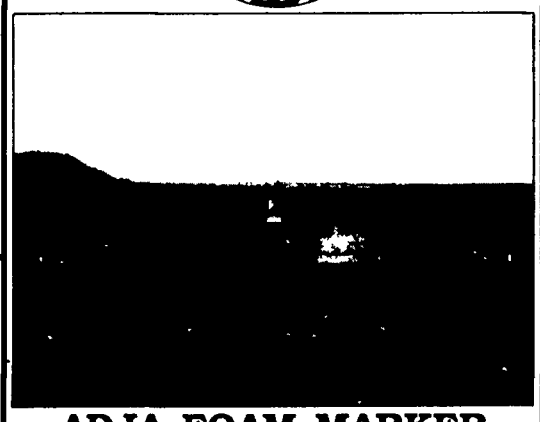
ADJA



ADJA FOAM MARKER

A long lasting Foam Marking System that leaves highly visible strips or balls of foam The ADJA Foam Marker is a new concept in foam generation which eliminates the need for compressors, pumps, or solution tanks, etc

The simplicity and reliability of this state-of-the-art marker make it the most reasonably priced marking system presently available to the farming community.

Simple electronic controls allow in-cab control of on-off switch, left or right marking, foam mark size, and distance between marks. The ADJA Foam Marker is ideal for use on a variety of surfaces such as summerfallow, stubble, cultivated or disced stubble, green crops, green grass or brown grass A totally new formula produces foam that will last for one full day or more.

ATTENTION OWNERS OF DYE OR SILVER MARKERS - With the use of a very simple adaption kit the ADJA Foam Marker can be added to your existing system at very little expense. This will allow you to mark with dye or foam, depending on your field conditions.

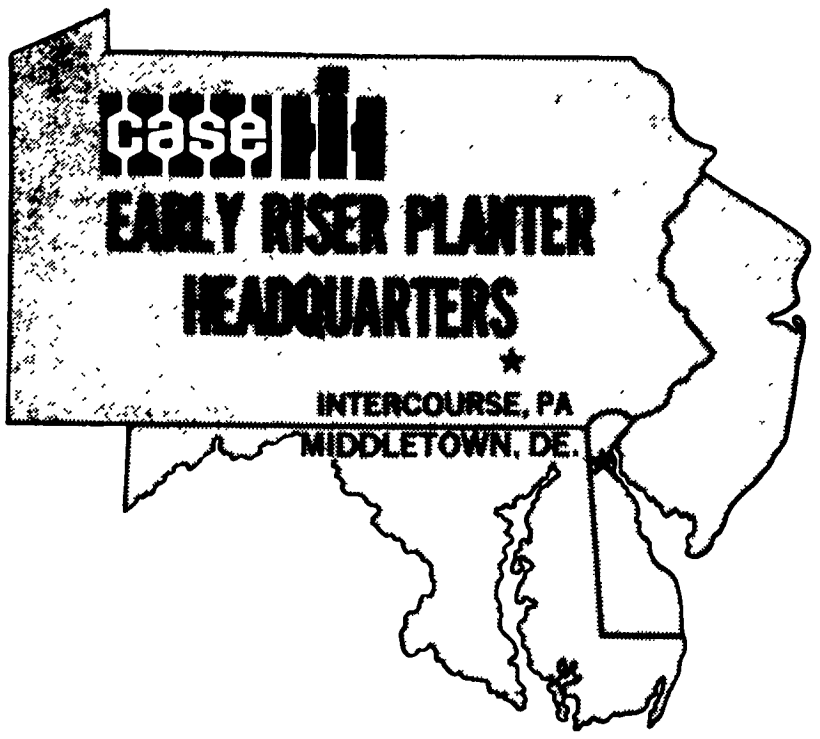
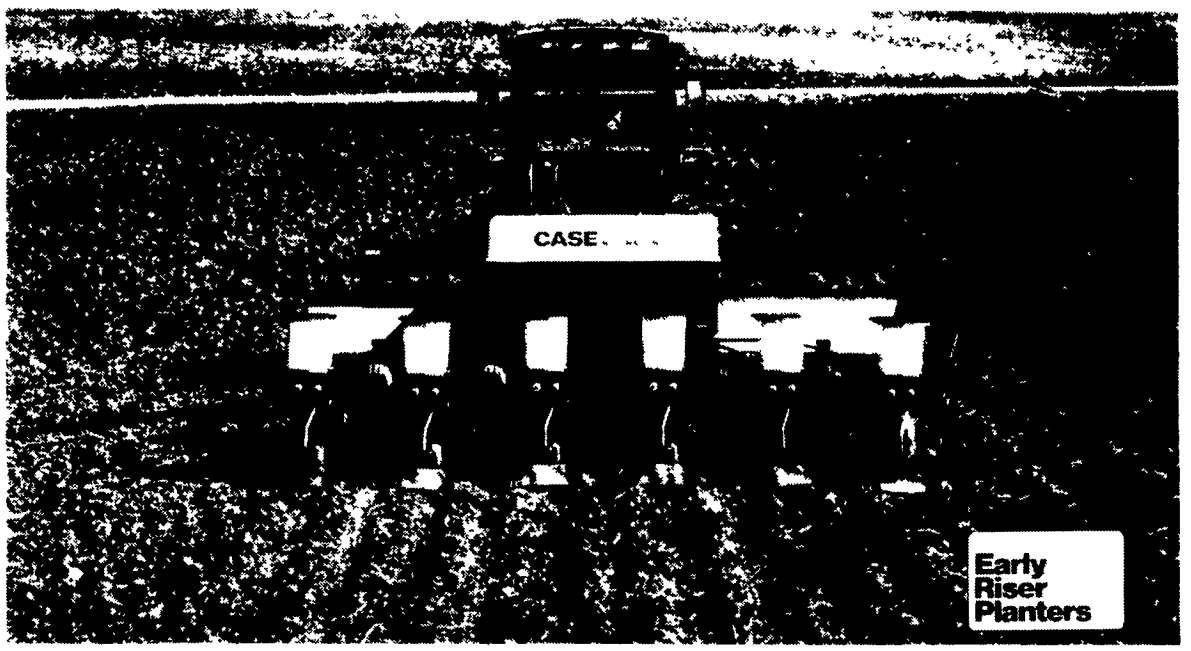
TO TILL or NOT TO TILL...

The Choice Is Yours

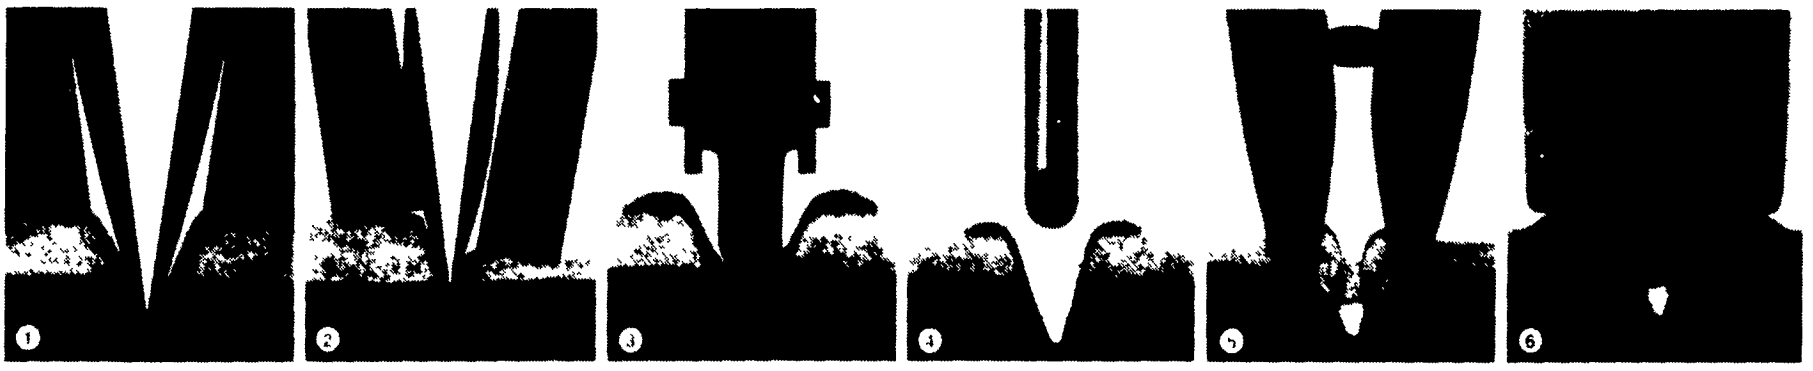


EARLY RISER PLANTER

THE ONE FOR CONVENTIONAL, MIN-TILL, NO-TILL & SOD



The 900 Series Early Riser Row Units Are The Secret!



1. Case IH staggered doubled disk openers reduce power demands, effectively cut through trash and penetrate hard soils, eliminating the need for costly colter attachments common to so-called "no till" planters.

2. Exclusive front pull equalizing depth gauge wheels are connected through special linkage that maintains equal pressure on the gauge wheels at all times. Grooved gauge wheel tires work to trap the moist soil brought up by the openers so that soil is placed back into the bottom of the seed trench following seed placement.

3. Improved Furrow firming point forms a well-defined "V" furrow bottom offering optimum depth control, seed spacing and germination.

4. With the clean "V" furrow bottom and smooth, narrow seed trench, seeds are delivered to the same depth and held in place for reliable uniform emergence.

5. Twin inverted staggered covering disks mounted directly behind the openers, return moist soil to the seed trench and provide good seed/soil contact.

6. Chevron-tread press wheels seal the closed seed trench and firm the furrow, eliminating air pockets and promoting optimum germination.

FARM FORUM OUR READERS WRITE

Editor:

As a Northeast dairy farmer I read with interest all the agriculture news that comes my way. In most publications RCMA has been a red-hot topic — as well it should be. Although most of the press seems to believe over order pricing is an excellent way to increase dairy farmers' income, many dairy farmers seem to believe the opposite. We hear and read plenty of complaints from farmers from Maine to Pennsylvania about the RCMA payments they've received so far. "It's too low!" "What's taking them so long?" "What — share with Order 2?" A question for those of little faith: did you send your RCMA check back??

Over order pricing is our only chance to be price setters. The government isn't worried about Northeast dairy farmers; other regions don't blink an eye at our problems. We (yes, US not THEM) are the only ones who can help ourselves. People who are trying to break RCMA love to hear our bickering and feed us with misinformation — it helps their cause. We have got to stick together, work together to make RCMA work. We must be well informed, vocal and constantly available to those who have doubts about RCMA. Yes, that's work; it's time consuming and often not pleasant — but isn't our future worth that effort? If we don't fight for a fair price in the market, no one else will do it for us.

To all of you co-op members and independent producers who have stood up for RCMA — keep on fighting! To those of you who sit on a bale of hay and complain — get involved, get fired up and join the fight for a better price and a higher standard of living for your families. Stand up and fight for RCMA!!

Editor:

It seems that the governments are forever picking on the farmers and making more regulations to make farming harder. And thereby liquidating a lot of us farmers. Also they are using high taxes to accomplish the same goal.

It's high time that the politicians, bureaucrats, and pressure groups that are really "agriculturally illiterate" begin to understand that we two million farmers (there used to be 20 million) are being over-worked to feed their thankless mouths. Of those two million farmers, less than one million are under 45 years old. And for one million farmers to feed 250 million Americans and 350 million foreigners of the world, is just too much for us to do. Each farmer has to feed 500 to 650 people, and that's too much work. No union would stand for that.

If the government and pressure groups know all about farming, then let them produce the food and we can do something else more fruitful and less tiring.

Paul Holowka,
York

Editor:

You ran two ads of interest to me in your most recent issue. One was signed by five Connecticut dairymen who extolled RCMA, and gave some hard evidence on how RCMA worked for them.

A 1973 premium figure was a standout — "We received up to 85 cents premium on $7.50 milk."

I checked it out. That's right. A full 11% of the blend price.

Farmland Dairies in its four-page ad in the same issue talks about paying a 75-cent premium per hundred.

This got me thinking. If Farmland really wants to match the good work RCMA did in 1973... and can do in 1988...its premium should be more like $1.32 per hundred. I base that on 11% of the $12.03 received in January by Order II, Zone 21 dairymen.

Possibly Farmland used the 57 cents it saved per hundred to pay for those four-page ads. I understand they ran in three or four farm papers. All in one week.

I'm sticking with RCMA, of course. RCMA just could reach that $1.32 premium this year. It will take all dairymen working together. Something like a barn raising. Only we're just fixing the roof on our marketing system.

Those Connecticut dairymen said it best in their ad:

"With RCMA—dairy farmers set the price. Without RCMA, dairy farmers took the price."

Editor, Farmers:

I feel Mr. Goldman's ad needs a response from a former Farmland shipper. My father and I shipped to Farmland for several years.

In his ad, Mr. Goldman said he has never turned farmers away because of over-supply and he is right. The job was left to his industry-trained fieldmen.

The first time Farmland shut out dairies around our area, was because they wanted to use only tractor-trailers to pick up and deliver to the plant.

The second time Mr. Goldman sent his industry-trained fieldmen to shut out more farmers in our area, they said you had to produce a certain amount per pick-up or leave.

They had a representative of Schep's Cheese in the same car. Farmers were told to ship more milk or go to Scheps. The whole Northeast knows what happened to all us poor souls that went to Scheps.

Mr. Goldman asked several questions about RCMA. I would like to ask him about his price increase of his milk in stores even before he started to pay premiums. I would also like to ask him about paying or making special deals for large producers to stay with Farmland.

RCMA may have its good and bad points, but at least it is a start and can work, which has been proven in other areas. Without RCMA, Farmland would not be paying premiums.

Mr. Goldman is right and his hands may be clean only because he has some excellent employees, but I wonder about his conscience.

His ad only showed me one thing, that he has become a very rich and powerful man at the expense of his independent farmers.

This is only my opinion and my experience as a Farmland producer of previous years. We were lied to more than once.

Editor;

As a former Farmland producer I feel obligated to respond to Marc Goldman's open letter to northeastern farmers.

We shipped milk to Farmland from 1943 until 1982 at which time we received a letter notifying us that we would be dropped in 30 days. During that 39 year period we never had any problems with quality and at the time we received our notice we averaged more than twice their minimum weight for pickup, so I called for clarification as to why I was being dropped. The secretary said that he had just left the office for a few minutes and she would have him return my call. I am still waiting.

Adversities that come into our lives often times become blessings. Having been a member of Eastern Milk Producers at the time Farmland dropped me I was quaranteed a market and as it has turned out a good market. Having my milk physically handled by Eastern since 1982 has been a blessing. I haven't had a problem with tractor trailers and my butterfat test has consistently equaled or has been above our D.H.I.A. test. When shipping to Farmland it sometimes run as much as 4 points below our D.H.I.A. If we would complain it would come up temporarily. Maybe, Mr. Farmland Producer, that's why some of your neighbors are getting extra checks from Farmland now. If I were you I would call Farmland, they might just have an extra check waiting for your call. It appears the old saying, the wheel that squeaks gets the grease, is still true.

It is my opinion Farmland is only paying our extra checks and premiums because they are trying

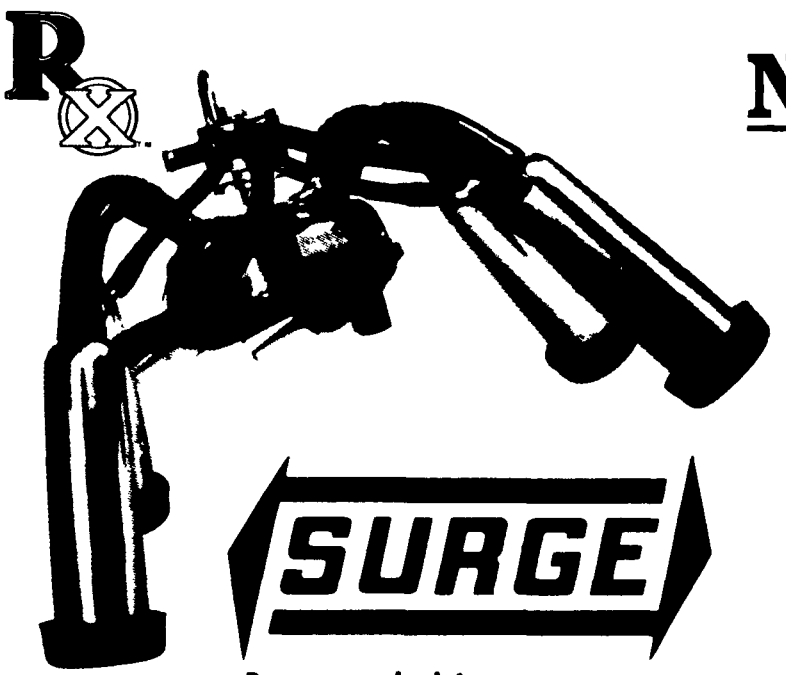
You wouldn't sacrifice good milking to end cross-contamination.



Because we both know that good enough isn't enough.

NEITHER WOULD WE!

Sure, cross-contamination is a problem. But you're not about to give up milking efficiency just to end it.

We knew that. So when we set out to design a milker that would lower cross-contamination, we refused to compromise good milking procedures.

Our stubbornness paid off. And the result is our new Surge Rx™ milker — a true four-chamber milker. With four separate chambers and four separate milk hoses that totally isolate and transport each quarter's milk.

Without sacrificing air flow, milk flow, vacuum stability, or visibility. Without sacrificing efficiency.

Talk to your independent Surge dealer about a demonstration, right on your own dairy.

In today's economy you can't afford to compromise. And now, thanks to our Rx, you don't have to.

to stop the best opportunity we have had to get a fair price for our milk, paid to all producers on an equal basis through R.C.M.A. and not because of their sincere concern for the farmer. Those who have received extra checks and premiums from Farmland, have everyone that has signed up for R.C.M.A., whether an independent or Coop. member, to thank, not the generosity of Mr. Goldman.

Years ago the management of Farmland at that time told my father that if the farmers would just stick together they could get what they wanted, now Mr. Goldman is doing everything in his power to prevent that from happening. Apparently he can see the handwriting on the wall if R.C.M.A. is successful.

I would like to ask a few questions that I feel every farmer should think about.

1. Why wasn't Farmland willing to pay more before R.C.M.A. came on the scene?
2. Why does Farmland want us to stay independent and weak?
3. Why does Farmland only cater to the large producer and those on hard roads?
4. If Farmland is so helpful with the farmer's problems why couldn't they return my call?
5. Does Farmland want us to stay independently weak so they can become richer?

In closing I would like to say that I feel R.C.M.A. is the first real opportunity we as farmers have had to have a say in what we should be paid for our milk. Please fellow dairymen lets not miss this opportunity, sign up and support R.C.M.A.

I read your editorial "We Need The Facts" (March 5, 1988).

I am a retired Du Pont Engineer. I would like to help in this project.

There is a dam in Londonderry Twp. built about 1900. There is no silt in it. The stream drains several sq. miles of farmland and woodland.

I believe most of the chemicals in the bay are coming from the municipal sewerage disposal plants. They are using feraic chloride by the tank carload to precipitate the heavy metals in the waste water. I have yet to see a study of the effect of iron on the bay. They are also an excellent source of N K P.

Swenson Elected New NFU President

ALBUQUERQUE, NM — Lee Swenson has been elected the new national president of Farmers Union. In balloting Wednesday morning, the 40-year-old South Dakota Farmers Union president was elected to the post to succeed retiring national President Cy Carpenter of St. Paul, Minnesota.

Swenson won the race in a close contest over Rocky Mountain Farmers Union President John Stencel of Denver.

The farm organization also elected a new national vice-president. Oklahoma Farmers Union President Jack Kelsey was chosen to replace Stanley M. Moore of Jamestown, N.D. Moore stepped down from the position, but continues to serve as president of the National Farmers Union Insurances.

Ohio Farmers Union President Charlie Nash was also a candidate for the vice-presidency. A third candidate for president, Minnesota Farmers Union President Willis Eken, withdrew from the race just prior to the convention.

The new national president said his immediate goals include working with state leaders to assure a continued unified and strong national organization. Swenson told a news conference at the convention, "I am absolutely committed to strengthening all sides of the Farmers Union triangle: education, legislation and cooperation."

Yes, Young Farmers Can Get Started Without A Large Investment

BY PAT PURCELL

LITITZ — Where there is a will there is a way the saying goes and for many young people who are dreaming of having that farm of their own, being willed their parents' farm may be their only way to acquire that dream.

However, when the young farmers are ready to take over the home farm, is usually much too soon for their parents to relinquish their responsibilities. And there are young couples who want a farm, but do not have that home farm to hope for. How can young people who want to build their career on a dairy farm get a start?

David and Betty Weaver of Annville asked that question six years ago and found an answer to it with some help from Newton Bair, the former Lebanon County extension agent.

Bair developed a program on the farm owned by Edwin and Sarah Funk. Weaver uses the facilities for his milking herd and young stock and Funk provides Weaver with all the feed and forage he wants. In return Funk receives half of Weaver's milk check, so it directly benefits Funk to make sure Weaver's herd gets top quality forages.

Without this arrangement David and Betty say they don't know how else they could have gotten their start.

"The advantages of this arrangement are that I get a direct return on my investment. I did not have to make a big investment in land, tractors, equipment. A lot of the risk has been taken out. If I would rent land and then have a dry year, well, that's just what hurts a lot of farmers. I have less capital invested and a lot less risk," explained Weaver. "It would have cost me atleast six times as much to get started if I would have tried to do it myself."

Funk provides the Weavers with housing, cattle housing, high-moisture corn, corn silage, bedding and equipment for hauling manure. And according to the contract, if Funk does not have enough due to growing conditions, he will need to purchase enough corn or hay as has been the case.

"There is an advantage to the owners. They get a direct return on their crops. I have to maintain a herd average of 14,000 pounds in order for him to get enough of a return on his forage," said David.

The Weavers' herd average for March was 19,215 pounds and 672 pounds of butterfat. David explained that reaching for production beyond that would not be to his benefit.

"When I look at the costs of feed additives it is not possible for me to pay 50 cents if I only gain a dollar because I split that dollar with Edwin and I break even. So high-tech feeding has to pay back more than 2-to-1 for it to work for me," explained David.

David bought half older registered cows and half good grade heifers to start his herd and were fortunate to have better than fifty percent heifer calves born. He uses all AI.

SHARING THE WORK

When they started the arrangement Funk and Weaver would work for each other, but David said this became more of a hassle. Now Edwin cleans the barn and hauls the manure for him and David helps Edwin during harvesting and planting time.

"It's important to keep a good working relationship and fortunately we do. It works very well for us," said David.

HEIFERS AND CULL COWS

David is also in the business of exporting heifers. The first $1400 he receives for heifers is split 50-50 with Edwin. Any amount above $1400 David keeps. If he raises a heifer to replace a culled cow, the culled cow price is split 50-50. If David sells a cull cow to buy a cow, there is no split. David has a 20 percent cull rate and sells eight to ten heifers each year.

REPAIRS/MAINTENANCE COSTS

Expenses for repairs to the barn, barn cleaner, silos or milking equipment is split 50-50 between Edwin and David, but according to the contract it cannot exceed $1500 to the tenant.

"My costs are very fixed so I can actually project my income according to my production," said David.

MORE TIME FOR MANAGEMENT

David and Betty agree that the arrangement puts a lot less stress on the young farming family. David says it enables him to do a better job because he has more time to devote to managment and breeding decision.

"My goals have been to have my 2-year-olds plus atleast two points in type and $100 PD$. I was well pleased with the scores of my 2-year-olds," said David.

Health costs for his entire herd runs about $45 per animal per year. Most of that is for preventative medicine and he said he has not experienced any significant health problems.

David does the foot trimming on his herd and is on a monthly herd health check. He feeds newborn calves colostrum and then whole milk until they are weaned at six weeks. Calves get a grain mix early. Calves are kept in the barn and he has not lost a calf this year and has had a low calf mortality rate. Having more time to spend with the calves, heifers and cows, he believes has kept his health problems low.

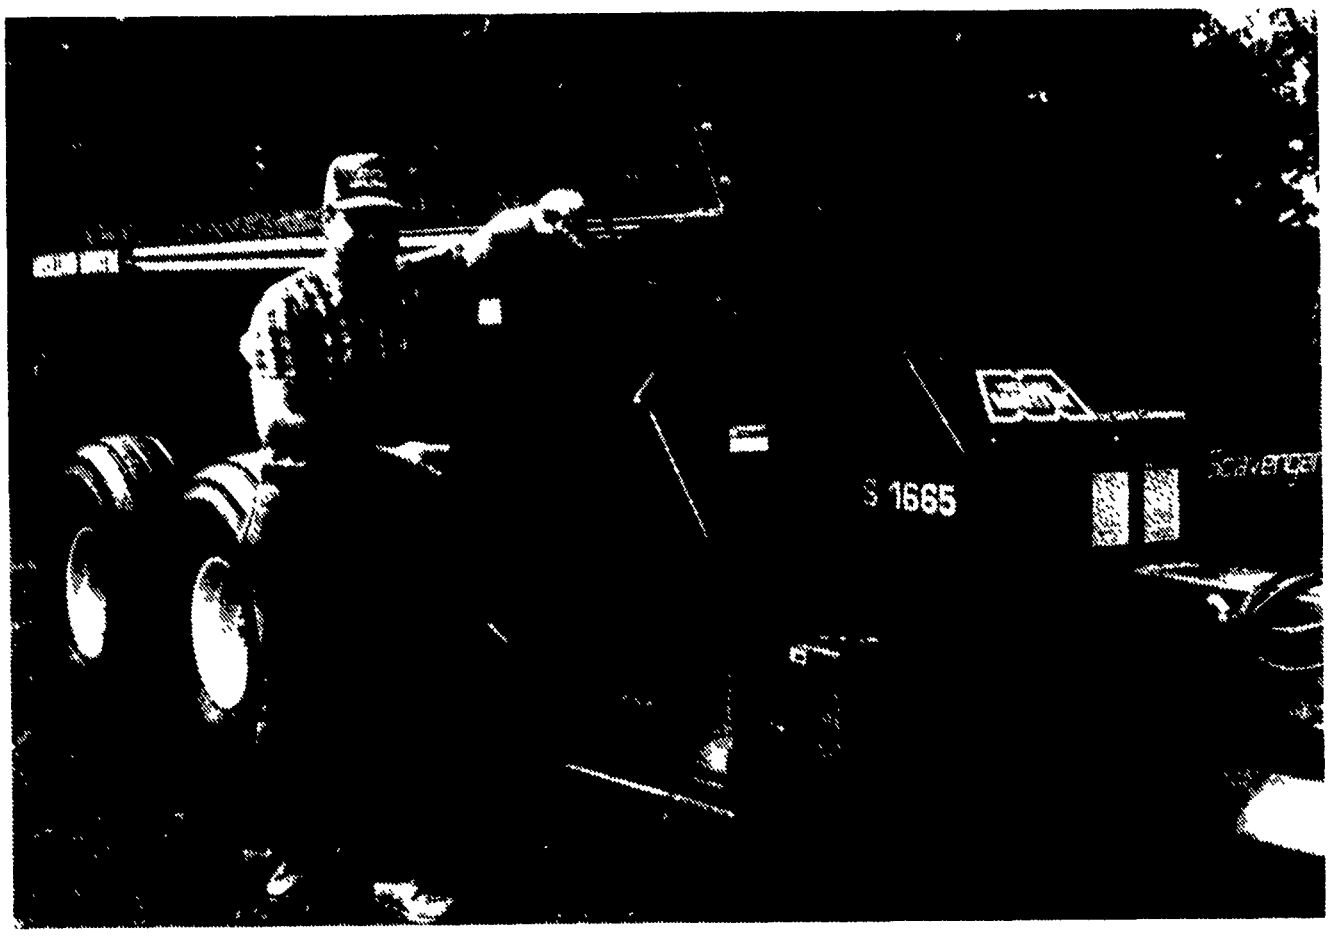
He is raising healthy, growthy heifers with a calving interval of 12.3 months. His breeding services average 1.7 per conception. There is no doubt in David's mind that the top quality forage and feed his animals receive is the key to his reproduction success.

A WAY TO START

Without this arrangement would David and Betty have been able to get their start in dairy farming? They are doubtful. But one thing they are sure of is that without this opportunity, starting out for them would have been much more difficult.

"This is an excellent way to get started," said David, but as he and Betty look at each other they shake their heads and Betty adds, "We still would like to have our own farm someday."

No spreader on the market can match the versatility of Scavenger.™



A new look in spreader design.

More than 7 years ago, Hedlund/Martin introduced the Scavenger—a manure spreader based on an entirely new technology.

Gone were unreliable apron chains and "rooster comb" beaters. Gone were leaky endgates. Gone were the old-fashioned boxy shape. In their place—a unique patented square auger and side-discharge expeller reel. And with its welded Unibody construction, Scavenger looked like nothing before.

But even though it looked unusual, Scavenger worked. Scavenger proved itself where it counts—in the fields of farmers all across America.

And like all successful advances in technology, Scavenger invited a slew of competitiors. Today, a wide variety of farm equipment manufacturers sell a Scavenger-like machine.

Unmatched performance.

While some of these look-alike units are perfectly adequate for certain manure-spreading application, none can match Scavenger's overall versatility. Scavenger spreads all kinds of manure—liquid, semi-solid, pen pack (even frozen)—all year 'round. In even spread patterns up to 50 feet. All in one machine.

So when you find it's time to purchase a new spreader, take a hard look at your choices. Don't be misled by spreaders that claim to do it all. Compare actual capabilities. We think you'll find your choice obvious. You'll choose the spreader with unmatched performance—Scavenger.

See for yourself.

For a firsthand look at Scavenger, see your local Hedlund/Martin dealer. Or write: Hedlund/Martin, Inc., A Gehl Company, 741 Kutztown Road, Myerstown, PA 17067. Telephone: 717-933-4151.

Certifying Pesticide Applicators

Anyone who uses or supervises the use of restricted-use pesticides must be certified in order to legally use them. To become certified initially, private applicators (farmers, gardeners, etc.) must pass an examination. Once acquired, their certificates are good for three years.

To renew their certificates, private applicators must accumulate at least 12 update training credits every three years. Many of these credits can be obtained by attending various agricultural meetings where approved pesticide training is offered.

A special Pest Management Meeting has been scheduled to help applicators who have missed other training opportunities get the training and credits they need. It will be held on Wednesday, March 23rd, 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center. The meeting will provide 4 training credits, 2 of which are core credits and 2 that are category credits. This should meet the needs of people whose certificates expired in the latter part of 1987 and have to be renewed before the end of March, 1988.

Half of the training credits that applicators need must be "core" credits, received for instruction pertaining to general topics such as: safety, environmental protection, labels, regulations, equipment and application techniques. The other half of the credits is for instruction obtained on more specialized topics such as: pest identification, specific pesticides, control of specific pests in specific situations or integrated pest management.

People requiring new certificates and those who have left their certificates expire must pass an examination conducted by the Penna. Department of Agriculture. These exams are given the first Monday of the month, 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. at the Farm and Home Center, Lancaster.

A Penn State correspondence course and study manual is available to help applicators prepare for the examination. For more information about the study manual, contact your County Extension Office.

Rabies Alert

Rabies has arrived in Lancaster County and the number of reported cases is expected to increase significantly due to a sizeable population of wildlife that can mingle rather easily with our large number of farm animals, pets and people.

Everybody should be alert to the danger of exposing themselves to rabies-infected animals because the disease can be deadly. Take time to instruct children, farm workers and others who are exposed to farm animals, pets and wildlife. Inform them of the risks that exist and of preventive measures that can be taken.

The disease organism is carried in the saliva of infected animals. Avoid contact with any wild animals, especially raccoons, and with any other animals that exhibit unusual behavior, such as slobbering, staggering, unusual friendliness, or a desire to bite.

Vaccinate cats and dogs and other animals that are companions to people, such as horses. Farmers may also want to seek the advice of their veterinarian about the need to vaccinate valuable breeding stock.

Destroy and bury suspicious animals, especially raccoons, foxes and skunks. Protect yourself and other animals from contacting these dead or suspicious animals. If these animals are known to have had contact with humans or other animals, try not to damage the brain in the process of destroying the animal. Report the incident to your game protector, veterinarian, dog catcher, or the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. They may want to submit the animal's brain for laboratory analysis.

Immediately call your physician in cases involving human exposure, or suspected exposure.

Vaccinate for Lepto

Spring is a good time to protect your cattle from Leptosporosis and internal parasites. Before you turn your cattle out to pasture ask your veterinarian about the need to vaccinate for Lepto and the need for deworming cattle.

Leptosporosis is a very contagious disease that can affect the reproductive performance of cattle. Infected cattle shed the organism, and the organism survives well in bodies of water. So, infected bodies of water, such as streams, can be one method of spreading infection from herd to herd. Thus, it may be beneficial to protect cattle before they have contact with streams.

Deworming

Calves are very susceptible to injury caused by internal parasites such as intestinal worms, and can benefit from several dewormings a year. The older cattle become, the more resistance they have to intestinal parasites.

Pasture can harbor many intestinal parasites. The goal of a good deworming program is to rid an animal of intestinal parasites. The goal of a good deworming program is to rid an animal of intestinal parasites and to prevent buildup of parasites in pastures and in similar areas.

The parasite load of pastures generally increases as the summer progresses. Some parasite larvae from the previous year may have over-wintered. Worm-infested animals that are turned out to pasture, shed eggs and contribute to populations already present. As temperatures and moisture levels increase eggs hatch and the larvae population grows and spreads. Animals ingest the larvae and shed more eggs, and larvae populations mushroom.

If cattle are worm-infested, they should be dewormed prior to being turned out to pasture. This deworming may not be necessary if heifers have been raised on concrete in total confinement prior to their first exposure to pasture or dirt lots where they have access to vegetation (grasses, weeds, etc.) growing in the lot or on the other side of the fence.

Heifers should be dewormed about three weeks after being turned out to pasture, and the timing of this is important. About three weeks after cattle ingest parasite larvae, the larvae mature inside the animal and start shedding eggs. The goal is to deworm the cattle before these first-consumed larvae start producing eggs - before the cow starts shedding more eggs back onto the pasture. If you wait longer than three weeks, you will have missed your best opportunity for preventing larvae buildup in the pasture because the cattle will have already shed some eggs.

Another deworming six weeks after being turned out to pasture will help make your efforts pay off. This is your opportunity to catch all those larvae you missed with the previous deworming and prevents the risk of cows shedding additional eggs. So, cattle may need to be dewormed three and six weeks after being turned out to pasture, and infested cattle will need an additional deworming just prior to the pasture season.

For a deworming program to be successful be sure that no non-treated cattle have access to the pasture. If the milking herd is not dewormed also be sure that all cattle being treated get the proper dosage and at the proper time. For this reason, boluses and injections are preferred over feed additives. Some animals may not consume adequate amounts of "treated" feed to assure adequate control and to prevent the shedding of parasite eggs. Remember, it only takes one infested animal to contaminate a pasture. Needless to say, if you use boluses or injections proper restraint facilities will make the job much easier.

Some dewormers have a longer "active" period in the animal than others, and the timing of the treatments will be different than outlined above. Other dewormers have slow-release features and provide seasoning protection from a single treatment. Some dewormers are more effective on certain parasites than others, and for broader spectrum control it may be beneficial to switch back and forth from one product to another. Some are approved only for non-lactating cattle.

In summary, deworming cattle, especially calves and heifers, can pay dividends on most farms. To be beneficial deworming must be done properly; otherwise you're probably wasting your time and money. Because of the variety of products and programs that are available you may want to consult your veterinarian, and be sure to comply with label instructions.

Farm Toy Show Scheduled

LANCASTER — Why is this hobby growing so quickly? Lancaster's rich heritage in farming is one of the reasons. The little kid in all of us may be the other.

Less than 10 years ago only a few collectors of old farm toys were known, and now many are included in the country, perhaps hundreds. More than a thousand have shown up at local farm toy shows. The talk of the hobby is everywhere you go in the farming community. Auctioneers must be happy to find old farm toys when preparing for an auction, because they are now itemizing them on there sale bills. You use to be able to go to a local public auction and pick up a few items for your collection for a few dollars and even be the only collector there. But now you go and run into a dozen or more collectors who are there for the same reason you are and it ends up that someone the collectors don't even know bought most of the toys. Are people other than collectors buying at prices which are going through the roof?

Local farm toy shows have been increasing in size and attendance over the last few years. The first Lancaster show was held April 9, 1983 at Willow Valley Motel, which was attended by about 400 people, the next year the show had to be moved to allow it to grow. Shows in Lancaster have grown in attendance of near 2000 and drawn people from as far away as Florida, Canada, and Iowa. Last years show had people coming from 13 states. On March 26, 1988 the Lancaster Farm Toy Show will be returning to Willow Valley Conference Center in its new facility. All the tables are sold out for the show, with entries from 14 states and filling 140 tables. Collectors include people from children to grandparents for many different reasons. Most serious collectors are over 30 years old. Many enjoy the hobby as a way to remember their career or childhood. You may hear a collector say, "I grew up on a John Deere just like that one," or "I sold Allis-Chalmers like those for 25 years," or, "These are toys just like I had when I was a kid."

Collections vary for different reasons also, from trying to get all of one kind, such as Oliver, or ones for a certain time period, such as the 50's, or model the collector may have farmed with and the reasons go on and on. What ever the reasons they're all collecting for fun.

Collecting can get costly. Current toys may cost about $20. Toys 10 years old, in new condition may go for about $50. Toys from the 50's in new condition, if you can find then may cost $150 to $250. Farm toys made in the 30's and 40's even go higher. To find out more about this hobby, come out to the show, it's the sixth annual Lancaster Farm Toy Show, open to the public at 9:00 a.m. with an auction starting at 5:00 p.m. at Willow Valley on March 26, 1988.

Meats Judging Contest

The Lancaster County FFA Meats Judging Contest was held February 20, 1988, at Stauffer's of Kissel Hill, Lititz.

The contest, which is divided into three segments, is designed to test the student's knowledge of the meats industry.

The first segment of the contest required the entrant to evaluate sides of beef to determine yield and quality grade.

In the second part of the contest, students scored classes of fresh hams and beef ribs, ranking them from most desirable to least desirable. Then the final part of the contest involved identifying retail cuts of beef, pork and lamb. The students had to identify the retail cut by trade name, the species it came from and the particular wholesale or primal cut the retail cut came from.

The following three meats industry people who were instrumental in promoting and organizing the contest were Willie Kreider, better known as "Willie the Butcher," who provided the facilities and meat samples for the contest, his sons, Tim and Gerry Gregg of Maryland Hotel Supply Co., Inc., who put together the classes for the contest.

Tim Kreider served as official judge for the contest.

Individual place winners were: Shawn Broderick, Penn Manor; Bob Kloepfer, Lampeter-Strasburg and Jay Harnish, Lampeter-Strasburg.

The two top teams were first, Lampeter-Strasburg and second, Penn Manor.

Farm Credit Develops A Country Home Loan

BALTIMORE, MD. — In an effort to diversify their loan portfolio, the Farm Credit Banks have developed a "country home loan" program which they hope will attract qualified borrowers throughout Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, and Delaware.

What makes this program so attractive to both realtors and borrowers?

- Quick turn around from application to commitment.
- Streamlined "customer friendly" forms.
- No application fee.
- No origination fee.
- No private mortgage insurance.
- They are experts in rural property. The same person who takes the application (loan officer), does the appraisal - no appraisal fees.
- No tax escrow.
- No credit check fees.
- Loan decisions are made at the local office.
- Competitive interest rates; both fixed and adjustable rate mortgages available.
- Local office services borrower for the life of the loan - no secondary markets.

These distinctive characteristics also apply to loans for remodeling, repairing, and improving existing property and for construction loans. The real appeal on construction loans is the same interest rate stays on the loan from beginning to end and only one loan closing is required.

Baltimore is the second district in the Farm Credit System and currently lends to 53,000 borrowers in Puerto Rico and the five states it services.

NFU Opposes Decoupling Proposals

ALBUQUERQUE, NM — Proposals which would "decouple" farm program price supports from production programs met opposition at the 86th annual convention of the National Farmers Union.

In policy adoption Tuesday afternoon, delegates to the farm convention opposed decoupling programs which would substitute direct payments for price supports. The farm organization considers "decoupling" as a means of putting "farmers on welfare," according to a Farmers Union spokesman. "Farmers want federal program payments to help recover their cost of producing the food. These payments are actually subsidies to consumers that pass through the hands of farmers," he explained.

The farm convention called upon Congress to develop a "simplified and more direct farm program that returns to the goal of assuring producers a reasonable livelihood by providing price and income protection on a family farm level of production."

The NFU delegates said minimum price support levels should be established at least at 110 percent of the cost of production. The convention further suggested that mandatory market management programs, using marketing quotas and certificates, be established through producer referendums.

Stressing the need for targeting of farm programs to family-sized farm operators, the Farmers Union convention called for tiered marketing quotas, set asides, and price supports, together with overall and per program limitations. The limitations would include a cap on the total amount of CCC loans that any farmer could receive in any one year.

In addition the farm group said off-farm entities, such as corporations limited partnerships, and non-resident aliens should not be eligible for any farm program benefits.

The Farmers Union convention argued that the market-oriented label given to current farm policies is inaccurate. "These programs have been supply-oriented in operation, and are not concerned with fairness or stability of prices and income for farmers."

The farm convention questioned whether the CCC sales violated Congressional intent, pointing to a provision of law which prohibits CCC from selling grain stocks for less than 115 percent of the national average loan rate.

WINTERTIME PROBLEMS
The year 'round problems of water damage and carbonizing of the fuel injection system become more acute during the cold winter season And, diesel engines now become exposed to another wintertime problem: Waxing and Gelling Diesel fuel contains paraffin wax which develops into crystals as the temperature drops When crystals begin to form, the temperature is at "cloud point" The pour point of the fuel is the temperature at which the crystals have now formed into a lattice-type pattern, restricting fuel flow This is waxing and gelling, and it clogs filters and blocks fuel lines

Dairy Farmers Attend Northwestern PA Nutrition School

BY CAROLYN HILSDON GILLES
Crawford Co. Correspondent

CRAWFORD CO. — For four consecutive weeks, approximately 60 area dairy farmers went from barn to classroom where County Extension Agents and Penn State Dairy Specialists presented the latest information on dairy feeding programs.

Identical agendas were presented in Erie, Crawford and Mercer counties on consecutive days for the first three weeks of the program, culminating in the fourth week in a multi-county visit to the Crawford County Farm where Extension Agents illustrated the outcome of specific feeding programs with examples from the county herd.

The main purpose of the four week dairy nutrition school was to help the farmer to understand why dairy feeding programs are important and what important components should be considered. Speakers included Dr. Richard S. Adams, Penn State Dairy Nutritionist, Dr. Joseph Hlubik, Penn State Dairy Specialist, Mercer County Agent Dave Dowler and Erie County Agent George Wilcox. At the third session, assistance was also provided by Extension Agents from surrounding counties to help run computerized feed programs. Also participating in the programs were area feed company representatives.

Classroom discussions at each county site were augmented by a visit from the Penn State Forage Van. Forage from corn, alfalfa or grass hay differs considerably in nutritional content. Tests run in the van on forage determine dry matter, protein levels, fiber levels, total digestible nutrient levels and mineral levels. On-site computers made it possible to provide meaningful instruction as dairy farmers stood by while their forage analysis results were entered into computerized feeding programs and other nutrient values were added to determine properly balanced rations for milk production and reproduction.

Quality in/quality out- Erie County Extension Agent George Wilcox enters information based on forage analysis into the computer program for Brenda Wheeler and Marsha Holowell of Crawford County. Nutrients of known value were added to supplement those present in forage to produce a balanced feed ration for milk production and reproduction.

Erie County Extension Agent George Wilcox shows a cow in early lactation as he discusses the balance of grain vs. forage in feed ration. Too much grain in the ration may make the feed move through the cow at a rate too fast for proper digestion of nutrients.

NEEDS AND WANTS

By Tom Brewer
Assoc. Prof. of Ag Economics

Most of us would probably give similar definitions for the words need and want. Only when citing examples of things that could be classified as needs or wants would we likely disagree. A list of a person's needs during the first half of this century would surely be different from one composed today. However, many items on a list of wants from an earlier time would probably show up on today's list of needs.

As a young farm boy during the 1930's, I thought my needs included lots of food, overalls, shoes, a good place to sleep and not much more. Today children would include a television and an automobile on their list of needs. Television, having not yet been commercially developed and hence unknown to me, wasn't even on my want list at a similar age. Even mail order catalogs, referred to as "wish books" in my area, didn't include them. In addition, I'm quite sure many of the pre-World War II meals, which I thought so good, would be viewed with disdain by most of today's consumers. Year-round fresh vegetables, pizza, fast food and french fries were items unknown to me, and I expect to most others during that period. Today they are standard fare. On our farm table of that earlier era there was always plenty, but choices were very limited -- sometimes to only one. That doesn't mean a choice of one vegetable, one salad and one meat but one food, and it was good. I was fortunate to have had a mother who could turn baked beans or scrambled eggs or a pot of home made soup into a very tasty, satisfying ,single-dish meal. Incomes were low, present day foods were not yet invented or were not available and our food needs were met very simply. Ice cream by contrast, particularly store-bought, was a treat. It was a delicacy far above the level of a need. It was on the want list. And want we did. Only rarely did we experience the sheer joy derived from licking an ice cream cone. Today, higher incomes and home freezers have made commercially produced ice cream a staple food item, and it is now a need of most youngsters. Children still have wants -- things that they never seem to be able to get enough of but the wants of an earlier day have become necessities and thus transformed into needs, while today's wants were, for the most part, not even heard of then. As time passes some things get added to the needs list while others are removed, but the wants list seems limitless. Its expansion is curtailed only by the list maker's imagination or the creativity of manufacturers and the effectiveness of their advertising.

Economists get irritable with people who talk about the strong demand for an item and cite the many who want it in an attempt to prove that their statements have validity. Economists say wants aren't a measure of effective demand and for sellers of commodities such evidence is nonsense. Wants aren't really economic demand. Wants backed up by money may be. Wants that are strong enough so people actually spend money to satisfy them do represent effective demand. Economists have long observed how consumers spend their money. They have not been especially surprised by the results. People spend their limited amounts of money in very similar ways, but in very different ways than they did in my boyhood. They tend to make sure they buy those things that are most necessary first and then if some money is left use it to either buy something from their want lists or save it till they get enough to buy a really big item. Food, of course, is one of those necessities. If there are plentiful supplies of food -- more than meets the perceived needs of all consumers -- prices stay low, and food stuffs may even go to waste since consumers can't be induced to buy more once their stomachs are full, and an adequate future supply seems assured. By contrast, even an imagined shortage can send prices of foods and other necessities on the needs lists, sky rocketing. At one time during the 1970's, relatively short supplies sent retail hamburger prices soaring. It was almost as though consumers believed supplies would eventually drop to zero, and they'd never get to taste another hamburger. The public was purchasing as though it were in a feeding frenzy. The supply situations for several other necessities elicited similar consumer responses. Most notable among them were gasoline and paper tissue shortages and, for a while, sugar. People hoarded because they were fearful of running out, and this abnormal level of buying drove prices even higher creating more and more fear among consumers. All needs or necessities have one economic trait in common. Because they are necessities, consumers will bid against each other to ensure that they get their individual supplies. A small reduction in supply, even a perceived one, will drive prices up very strongly.

In this country, the shoe is on the other foot most of the time. There aren't any perceived shortages, and customers don't work themselves into bidding frenzies. Instead, producers underbid their fellow farmers so they can sell. The net result or economic trait, which identifies this group of commodities we have on our needs list, is that small changes in supply, real or imagined, lead to very big changes in prices. Economists describe these commodities as being price inelastic.

On the other hand, those commodities on the want lists have a different set of economic traits. A small reduction in supply of one of them will not result in a bidding war among consumers because, after all, they are not necessities. Prices for such commodities are said to be relatively price elastic. In other words, prices for such products do not go up or down a great deal with small changes in supply.

A few weeks ago, while attending The Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association meetings at Hershey, I listened to a presentation made by an innovative market-oriented young farmer from North Carolina. His presentation was very good and was so stimulating that I and several others sought him out later, and he led a lively discussion in the corridor. The man's name is Mr. Carrigan. He lives in Mooresville, N.C., and he made a comment that I'd like to pass along to those contemplating diversification of their farming operations or those looking for alternative crops. When asked why he was shifting to flowers, ornamentals, Christmas trees and the production of other non-food items rather than increasing outputs of some of his food crops, he replied that he could make more money catering to peoples wants than he could producing food to meet their needs. I thought he made a very strong point. I would not attempt to explain exactly what he meant, but I believe he was correct. After all, food is not often in short supply in this country, as hamburger was believed to be back during the 1970's. Generally there is abundance, and prices tend to be low because food is a necessity and price inelastic. Mr. Carrigan is a direct marketer so he does gain the profits and incurs at least some of the costs experienced by middle men in a more typical system. If he were to expand production of food items, he'd drive his prices down still further. Once his customer's stomachs are full, they want no more. But when his customers' appetites are satisfied for bedding plants or any number of other non-food items, prices will not have to fall so low to sell the remaninder -- they are more price elastic. When we think of all the pets, pet food, bird seed, etc. that are, or could be, on consumers' want lists, I think Mr. Carrigan is making a good point. Why expand by producing more for an already over supplied market.? Maybe we should look at consumers want lists and produce something they want -- and, oh yes, be willing to pay for.

Better Beans. Better yields. Better get some.

We're convinced that these beans are the best we've ever developed. Plant some and see for yourself. We think they'll convince you, too.

3981 Versatility has made this late Group III variety one of the top performers in the Pioneer lineup. It can be planted on a variety of soil types, and generally maintains good yields on the soils. 3981 has a 2.5 bushel per acre yield advantage over Williams. Additional traits include: bushy plants that work well in wide rows, high podding characteristics, very good shattering resistance and very good field tolerance to most races of Phytophthora Root Rot.

NEW 9361 You'll be looking at an impressive new soybean variety with this excellent mid-Group III variety. 9361 also offers high yield potential, strong emergence and early vigor. Good tolerance to Phytophthora Root Rot is another desirable feature of 9361. Because of its smaller seed size each unit goes a little farther at planting.

9391 As a new late Group III variety, 9391 is the yield leader. It has a wide area of adaptation and performs well under many growing conditions. 9391 gets out of the ground quickly, has good standability, and is resistant to Races 1-3 and 6-11 of Phytophthora Root Rot. It also has good field tolerance to other prevalent races. Smaller seed size and better seed quality gives 9391 additional advantage over the popular 3981 variety.

What does mange cost and what does it take to eliminate it? What are the best drugs to use against Haemophilus pneumonia? What is the best combination of air temperatures and velocities for keeping weanling pigs comfortable?

MANGE

There isn't anything nice about a mange mite. It burrows into the skin. It makes a pig itchy and miserable. And until recently it's been tough to control and nearly impossible to eliminate.

New products on the market have improved mange control dramatically. Ectrin (fenvalerate), one of the first recent products is safer and, trials show, as effective as the old lindane-plus-toxaphene combination. Prolate was approved about the same time as Ectrin. Although I haven't seen any research data on Prolate, it is well accepted by producers in Pennsylvania and from what I hear is providing good control. Both Ectrin and Prolate are sprays that require thorough coverage and high pressure (100 - 200 PSI) to be effective. They also require two applications, 7 to 10 days apart. Prolate has a one-day withdrawal. Ectrin has no withdrawal.

Ivomec (Ivermectin) was approved for pigs a year or so after Prolate. Ivomec is lot different than anything we've had to battle external parasites. For one thing it's injected rather than sprayed. It requires only one treatment as long as the pigs aren't reinfested. And it controls most worms. And while it's easily the most effective mange control product we have, it's not quite ideal. For one thing the injectable route is not convenient for all operations and all stages of production. It's rather expensive - $.75 to $1.00 to treat a 100-pound pig. And it has an 18-day withdrawal.

The most recent addition to the market is Taktic (Amitraz). This one's a spray and like most products of this type, it requires at least two applications 7 to 10 days apart. But Taktic is partially systemic. That's important for two reasons -- 1) high pressure isn't an absolute necessity; 2) you can still do a good job without getting the entire animal soaked.

The withdrawal time for Tacktic is 1 day. Producers must be certified applicators of pesticides to use the product.

A recent field study conducted on heavily infested operations in 4 states shows that Taktic will eradicate mange when used properly. On these operations, all pigs were sprayed twice, 7 to 10 days apart. After the initial treatments, control was maintained with the following spray schedule: piglets at weaning, boars every 3 months, and sows when they entered the farrowing house.

Benefits of the treatment program included increased weight gains (12 lbs/market hog), improved feed efficiency (.1 lb feed/lb of gain), increase piglet survival (.6 pig), and a lower incidence of "greasy pig" disease. On a typical 100-sow operation, the net savings amounted to nearly $8000 per year.

HAEMOPHILUS PLEUROPNEUMONIA

This brand of pneumonia is a nasty one. It causes death in pigs with little or no warning. Pigs often weigh more than 150 pounds and have a stomach full of feed when they die. Affected areas in the lung are usually deep red and tightly attached to the rib cage. When deaths come, treatment must quickly follow.

Researchers at the University of Missouri recently compiled sensitivity of Haemophilus pleuropneumoniae to various antibiotics. Seventy-three bacterial isolates were cultured from pigs sent to the diagnostic lab from 1981 to 1987. Here's what they found:

* Of the injectable drugs approved for swine, ampicillin (Princillin), penicillin (Procaine penicillin G) and erythromycin (Gallimycin) gave the best results. At least 93% of the isolates were susceptible to these antibiotics.

* Oxytetracycline and tylosin were the least effective, with roughly 40 to 50% of the isolates susceptible to treatment.

* Lincomycin-Spectinomycin, an illegal combination often injected for Haemophilus, was not specifically checked. However, spectinomycin alone was checked and about 79% of the isolates were susceptible.

Their conclusions? Use ampicillin or penicillin in the injectable form. Feed grade antibiotics may provide limited control. Pen-strep at the 270 gram level seems to be the combination of choice.

DRAFTS AND THEIR EFFECTS ON PERFORMANCE

Researchers at Iowa State University recently finished trials with 3-week pigs to study the effect of drafts. They varied temperature from 75 to 95 degrees and air velocity from 21 to 80 feet per minute. Here are the results:

* As the temperature dropped, pigs ate more and gained faster.

* High air velocities tended to decrease growth rate. The effect was not as dramatic as temperature.

* In this experiment, neither air temperature or velocity had any effect on feed conversion.

Conclusions: Once pigs are eating, we can probably keep nurseries at 75 degrees rather than the 85 degrees often recommended.

USDA Sets Referendum Date

USDA formally announced last week it will hold the beef checkoff referendum vote on May 10 of this year.

The vote will be on whether to continue the $1-per-head checkoff used to fund beef research and promotion programs, including national beef advertising.

In a press release, J. Patrick Boyle, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS), said, "Cattle producers or those who imported cattle, beef, or beef products between Oct. 1, 1986 and March 31, 1988, will be entitled to vote in the referendum." AMS oversees the operations of the beef promotion and research program.

Voter registration and voting will take place on May 10 at Extension Service county offices. Absentee balloting procedures are being developed, and are contingent on approval of proposed absentee rules published in the Jan. 8 Federal Register. The May 10 date is the one recommended by the Beef Board.

Cattle Feeding Has Become More Complex

BY LISA RISSER

MARTINDALE — Fattening steers for market has gotten more and more confusing over the years. Farmers have more different feeds available, there are more different types of cattle, and there are different sorts of feeding systems.

This is why, when questioning a beef cattle nutritionist, a farmer will hear 'it depends'. "Each situation is a little bit different," said Harold Harpster, beef cattle nutritionist for Penn State. Harpster addressed farmers last week at the Eastern Lancaster County Cattle Feeder meeting.

One factor that effects feeding is the steer' emvornment. "Cattle in deep mud need 30 percent more energy for maintenance," Harpster stated. "Sometimes they won't go to the feed bunk if they have to wade through deep mud. Keep mounds in the lot so cattle can get out of the mud."

Other highlights of Harpster's discussion include:

•Feed efficiency isn't much different between various cattle breeds so long as each type is marketed at its optimum market point. Mixing breeds hurts only the all-in all-out farmer.

•Growth stimulants in general boost rate of gain 10 percent and feed conversion by 8 percent. At market time cattle that had growth stimulants will generate $3 for every $1 spent.

•If steers are shut inside a building, they must have proper ventilation. Adequate ventilation promotes good health and feed conversion.

•Wheat shouldn't be more than 50 percent of a ration because higher than that causes acidosis.

•If more than 50 percent of a ration is whole corn, it should be processed so all its nutrients can be accessed by the steer's digestive system. Fine grinding corn is worse than not processing it because then it passes through too quickly.

•If hay is a little off or corn is a little stale, molasses will increase palatability.

•Bunk life is extended when anhydrous amonia or urea is added to silage at ensilaging time.

New Zealand Lamb Imports Temporarily Stalled

DENVER, Co. — New procedures governing the importation of livestock into the United States have been issued by USDA, temporarily stalling the further importation of New Zealand live lambs into the U.S.

Sheep producers are being strongly urged by the National Wool Growers Association to make formal written comments on the proposal. All written comments are due by April 1.

The new regulations update existing rules, some up to 50 years old. USDA-Animal Plant Health Inspection Service proposed the changes following growing interest from New Zealand in importing large numbers of sheep into the U.S. Anticipated imports of sheep would overload federal livestock quarantine facilities under current regulations.

Although USDA considers the rule changes minor, changes could have a major impact on the domestic livestock industry.

Regulations call for the additon of requirements for approval of privately operated quarantine facilites for imported sheep. Currently, only federal facilities can be used for quarantine. Facilities would have to be properly located and equipped to prevent the spread of communicable diseases.

Health certification provisions help ensure that sheep entering the U.S. are disease free, to prevent the spread of new strains of disease in domestic flocks. NWGA has raised questions of the feasibility of testing for some strains of disease and the possibility of transmission of diseases to the domestic flock.

In addition, the regulations specify that sheep entering privately-operated quarantine facilities in the U.S. be accepted only at ports where appropriate federal personnel are available to screen the animals.

NWGA is urging USDA to hold congressional hearings on the proposed regulations to allow adequate producer and industry input into the important rules. USDA has stated further permits on the importation of live lambs will be postponed until the new regulations are adopted. A shipment of 10,000 New Zealand wethers is pending release from quarantine in Portland. They were the first shipment of feeder lambs to be imported into the U.S.

All written comments must be submitted with an original and two copies to Steven B. Farbman, Assistant Director, Regulatory Coordination, APHIS, USDA, Room 728, Federal Building, 6505 Belcrest Road, Hyattsville, MD 20782. State that comments refer to Docket Number 88-009.

Two public hearings on the regulations will be held March 15 at City Hall, City Council Chambers, 1220 Southwest Fifth, Portland, OR, 97204; and March 17 at the USDA, South Building, Room 1605, 14th and Independence Avenue, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20250. Hearings are from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. daily. Two copies of statements must be provided.

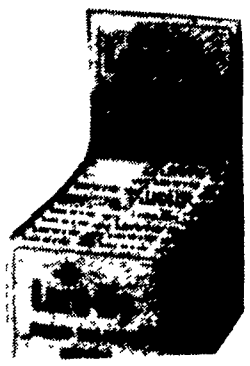
Farram Offers Non-Insecticidal Fly Control

PHOENIX, Ariz.— Farnam Companies offers a safer, effective alternative to fly baits for the barn, stable, corral and livestock production operations as well as the home and patio. A choice of three non-insecticidal premise fly control products are available from Farnam.



Farnam's FLY TERMINATOR contains a special concentrate of three feeding attractants plus a powerful sex pheromone. A durable weather-resistant jug holds thousands of flies. Recommended for the barn, stable, corral and livestock producing operation, FLY TERMINATOR contains no harmful insecticides so it's safer for use around children, pets and livestock.

Farnam's non-insecticidal, 24" long FLY-STIK is effective in all climates and safe to hang anywhere. The patented Fly-Glo paper combined with a muscalure and sugar formula attracts flies and traps them securely. Harmless to humans, animals and plants, FLY-STIK can be safely hung around stables, barns and even around the home.

Farnam's LURE-FLY is an inexpensive disposable fly ribbon for use indoors or out. LURE-FLY traps house flies, mosquitoes and other flying insects securely on its sticky surface. This environmentally safe product can be used for the home, patio, garden or at campsites and picnics.

Bush Hog/Lilliston's no-till drill has two hydraulic cylinders that control drill position, and the tongue cylinder controls the drill's leveling and cutting coulter depth.

New No-Till Drill Provides Precise Seed Placement

SELMA, AL — The new Bush Hog/Lilliston 9690 no-till drill provides precise seed placement at easily-selected depths.

"Specifically designed for no-till planting, the 9690 no-till drill provides advantages over conventional drills that have been adapted to no-till use," said Robert O. Moore, vice president, sales.

The 9690 is built to protect farmers against unnecessary delays and maintenance costs, he said. Rubber springs protect the opener assemblies against damage from obstacles and allow them to be reset on the go, these springs are superior to conventional systems in following ground contour, thus maintaining the proper planting depth.

Two hydraulic cylinders control drill positioning. The tongue cylinder controls the leveling of the drill and cutting coulter depth to insure precise planting depth. A control valve to the beam cylinders stabilizes balance pressures of up to 600 pounds per foot. The dual run feed system and easy-to-use application charts insure that just the right amount of seed is planted.

The 9690's 10½ foot planting width and 32 bushel grain box give farmers the planting capacity they need to get the job done quickly. The drill is available equipped with a 2-drill hitch and in a 7½ foot model.

Service Technician Graduates From School

RACHINE, Wis. — Raymond Rutt, a service technician at Binkley & Hurst Bros. in Lititz, has just completed a five-day intensive training course at the Case IH Service Training Center in Racine, Wis. The course emphasized the new Case IH 7100 Series tractors, called the Magnum line.

The training program included classroom and hands-on study of the Magnum line's transmission, engine, hydraulilc system, hitch and electronic systems. Students received an overview of the manufacturing processes used to assure high quality in the Magnum tractors.

To sharpen their servicing skills, students disassembled and reassembled components. They also practiced performing critical equipment adjustments and learned precise testing and troubleshooting procedures.

"I need to understand all the advanced technology built into these tractors," Raymond said, "so we can provide the best possible service to our customers."

The Magnum line represents the first totally new tractors from Case IH since the 1985 merger of J I Case and International Harvester. The four m odels in the 7100 Series range from 130 to 195 PTO horsepower. The tractors feature a totally new engine, transmission and cab that will set new standards in the farm equipment industry for performance, efficiency and comfort.

The new 505-cubic-inch engine delivers more power and lugging ability with excellent fuel economy. The 18-speed full powershift transmission offers the most speeds in the industry, and the cab features unparalleled visibility and operator comfort.

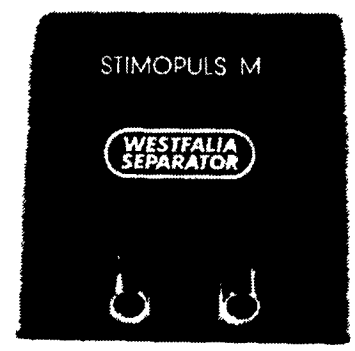
Westfalia Introduces A Pre-Milking Stimulator

ELK GROVE VILLAGE, Ill. — Westfalia Systemat has announced the introduction of the Stimopuls M, a new pre-milking stimulator/pulsator. It's designed for use with the Westfalia Metatron Milk Management System and the ACR 3 cluster remover to create a complete, efficient milking system for each individual cow.

The Stimopuls M provides milking pulsation, monitors milk flow and signals a pre-milking stimulation period designed to condition the cow's udder for maximum milk "let-down." Such conditioning can increase individual milk yield by up to 8%.

The Metatron Control on the Stimopuls M contains a complete stimulation phase and provides milking massage to the udder for the ultimate in milk "let-down." It also monitors milk flow, signals the end of milking, and switches the pulsator off in the release phase. The control can also be programmed to accommodate the individual needs of a herd, with 40, 60 and 90 second stimulation cycles.



This pre-milking stimulator provides milking pulsation and monitors milk flow.

When used in combination with the Metatron Control, the Stimopuls M enables the dairy farmer to better monitor total milk production on each cow, thus eliminating costly guesswork and errors.

FMC Markets New Grass Herbicide

PHILADELPHIA — FMC Corporation has announced that it will market Option®, a new grass herbicide from Hoechst-Roussel Agri-Vet Company, to soybean growers in the Midwest.

Applied post-emerge, Option controls problem weeds like foxtail, crabgrass, panicum, johnsonweed, shattercane, volunteer corn and many more annual and perennial grasses.

Option moves systemically through the target weed, killing the entire plant — even the roots. Applied at the recommended time to young, growing weeds, weed injury is visible from 4 to 10 days after application — and complete kill of the grasses takes just 12 to 21 days. Although most effective when applied to young, vigorously growing, grassy weeds, Option will control grass stages.

"Option controls grasses much more quickly and at larger sizes than competing products," says Rick Landrum, FMC herbicides product manager. "Therefore, it's an excellent choice for either a rescue treatment or for planned post-emerge use."

Option herbicide may be tank-mixed with Basagran®, Blazer® or Tackle® herbicides for a broader-spectrum rescue treatment or as a planned post-emergence program for broadleaf weed and grass control in soybeans.

Option is a trademark of Hoechst-Roussel Agri-Vet Company. Basagran and Blazer are trademarks fo BASF Corp. Tackle is a trademark of Rhone-Poulenc, Inc. © 1988 FMC Corporation.

Pork Board Allocates $2.33 Million For New Projects

DES MOINES, Ia. — The National Pork Board, at its recent meeting, appropriated $2.33 million in producer checkoff funds to be used by the National Pork Producers Council, the National Pork Council Women and the National Live Stock and Meat Board for various projects during the current year. The money is primarily from surplus funds the Pork Board has accumulated since the producer checkoff started on November 1, 1986. The fund surplus occurred when checkoff collections exceeded expectations during 1987. The Board had budgeted for $22 million, but the check off actually brought in $25.5 million in its first full year of operation.

The money funded for National Pork Producers Council projects include:

° $1.36 million for a comprehensive media and promotion campaign for the "White Meat" program with major television sponsorship in the All-Star Game and promotional advertising in the nationally distributed newspaper, USA Today. It will also include in-store promotion involving producers and will extend to co-op promotion in restaurants.

° $115,000 for two major national sales events promoting various ham products.

° $75,000 for development of a new cut of fresh pork. This is an extension of the highly successful America's Cut™ development and introduction in 1987. It will include development of a marketing plan for national introduction of the new cut and test marketing.

° $95,000 for development and introduction of new pork-based products in the school foodservice area. This will include exploration of getting new pork-based products introduced into school lunch programs.

° $50,000 for a co-op effort to get America's Cut or other pork menu items introduced in three national restaurant chains. This will involve custom menu development and assistance in test marketing.

° $42,000 to put together a pork quality profile that will document the quality of U.S. hogs. This will be used as a benchmark study to measure continued progress in the Pork Value program.

° $30,000 for production issue management. This will be used as seed money to provide informational material to producers about quality assurance in their hog herds.

The Pork Board provided $325,000 to the National Live Stock and Meat Board for a comprehensive program designed to communicate pork's positive attributes to health care professionals and consumer thought leaders.

The program will include continuation of the Meat Board's successful advertising campaign in magazines aimed specifically at health professionals, and the equally successful seminars designed for dietitians. The program is designed to increase understanding of pork's nutrient composition and benefits in a balanced, modified or general diet.

The Meat Board was also allocated $130,000 to develop and distribute a new product technical reference manual. The manual will be made available to corporate research and development directors, university meat scientists and others involved in developing specifications for new prok-based products.

The National Pork Council Women were provided $108,000 by the Pork Board to develop a pork-specific set of educational materials targeted for high school home economics and independent living students. The materials are to educate the students on the value of pork nutritionally, breaking down old myths concerning cooking, convenience and taste. The National Pork Producers Council and National Live Stock and Meat Board will be utilized as advisors in preparation of the educational materials.

PFA Urges New Cholesterol Standard

Because of the "Pennsylvania experience" in testing eggs for cholesterol, the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation has contacted USDA and the Egg Nutrition Center in Washington, D.C., to urge that the USDA standard of 274 mg. for large eggs be challenged. There is no doubt in anyone's mind that has been involved in the testing of Full Spectrum Farms eggs that all eggs are much lower in cholesterol than the USDA standard of 274 mg. This 274 mg. standard is being used by the American Heart Association and some other medical groups to make dietary recommendations about eggs which is damaging to the egg industry.

The Agricultural Research Service, which establishes cholesterol standards for eggs, has agreed to meet with industry representatives on Feb. 18, 1988 to discuss the 274 mg. standard for cholesterol.

MEASURE THE PERFORMANCE

FARM HISTORY

Oakleigh Farm, named after the huge oak trees that stand on the farm, is located near Mercersburg, Franklin County. The farm owned by Ed and John Brake, has been in the family since 1883. Dairy cows moved on to the farm in the 1940's, and the parlor on the farm was the second earliest parlor built in Franklin County.

MERCERSBURG, PA
FRANKLIN COUNTY

FEEDING PROGRAM

Ed and John's feeding program consists of 8 lbs. of baled hay with corn silage and grass silage being fed on the bunk. A Purina Concentrate is mixed with their own shelled corn, wheat and barley. Grain is fed through the parlor with an additional 5 lbs. being fed on the bunk with forage. The Brakes have been on a Purina Ration since February of 1986.

Lass was the highest milk producing cow in Franklin County during the 1987 DHIA year with 30,839 lbs. milk.

COMMENTS

"Our cows have shown an increase in milk every month since we've gone on Purina," Ed shares. "We also get good service from our Purina District Manager and Detrich Elevator, the local Purina Dealer. Since switching to Purina we've been able to increase milk production while maintaining our butterfat and good herd health," Ed adds.
